BICENTENNIAL LOOK INTO THE PAST: With the people of America celebrating the nation's 200th birthday tomorrow, our photographer arranged this portrail of a day far past in Berrien county's history. Into Berrien county's most historical landmark, the authentically restored 1839 courthouse at Berrien Springs, he invited a small group of 1976 citizens dressed in costumes of the era in which our country was born. Actually, Berrien county was an unsettled wilderness on July 4, 1776, but in less than 50 years after the Declaration of Independence was signed, settlers began filtering into this area as America spread westward from the original 13 colonies on the East Coast. ## Our Responsibility: To Maintain Freedom

Towering above the holiday atmosphere of the Fourth of July remains the undying impulse toward freedom. Our ancestors won it for us 9 years ago. It is our responsibility to maintain it against every challenge.

A fringe of colonies along the Atlantic scaboard, peopled by refugees from tyranny, successfully warded off the chitch of the despots two centuries ago: It was a mortal challenge to the then accepted theory that rulers had divine rights.

Against warnings from the old world that America could not succeed in substituting mob rule for the orderly reign of kings, this nation did set up, secure and expand the philosophy that governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed.

Under this beneficent impulse the funding fathers divided the authority of government to prevent any department from seizing tyrannical powers. When any group in government or out of it appears to be accumulating too much power, they reasoned, the 'citizens can slap down that group with their votes. This is the genius of their

We have not yet reached their goal. There are powerful forces today, in and out of government, which would make a mockery of the rights and responsibilities which took form in the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution and the Bill of Rights.

There is no better time than at the beginning of a new century to rededicate ourselves to the foresight, the hopes, the aspirations and cautions given by those who were at the birth of this nation. Their wisdom is not outdated, but sometimes it is too little

Their reaction to a resolution inroduced by Richard Henry Lee on June 7, 1776, that "these united colonies are, and of right ought to be, free and independent states" was one of delay. Some, like Robert R. Livingston of New York, hoped that a postponement in declaring independence would give England time to dispatch peace commissioners with acceptable proposals for reconciliation.

The moderates won a three-week delay for a vote on Lee's resolution. The next day, June 11, the Continental Congress approved the appointment of a committee to prepare a declaration of independence. Four members of that committee — John Adams, Ben-jamin Franklin, Thomas Jefferson and Roger Sherman — were strong proponents of independence. Livings-ton was the lone opposient. According to historian Thomas Fleming, 33-year-old Thomas Jefferson was assigned the task of writing the Declaration through a process of elimination. Franklin would have been given the job "if he did not have a loyalist son under arrest in New Jersey." Adams, recognizing his "vast unpopularity" and the "deep suspicion" with which many delegates viewed New Englanders, deferred to life of a nation, but to some Americans the chasm between 1776 and 1978 seems all but unbridgeable. Amid the hoopla surrounding the celebration of this country's 200th birthday, there is concern that the United States has forgotten its revolutionary origins and, like Great Britain in the 18th century, become the backer of the status quo or even of reaction. What, it is asked, has happened to those noble sentiments expressed in the Declaration of Independence?

The Declaration, which the Con-tinental Congress ordered to be "authenticated and printed" on July 4, 1778, may well be the most radical political document ever written. It holds that all men are endowed with certain "unalientable rights" and that governments derive their "just powers" from the consent of the governed.

The main purpose of the Declaration was not so much to sanction rebellion against established governments that deny their subjects the rights to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. It was; in the opinion of historian Carl Becker, something of a public-rela-tions ploy. "The primary purpose of the Declaration was not to declare independence but to proclaim to the world the reasons for declaring independence. It was intended as a formal justification of an act already accomplished."

The men who lobbied for acceptance of the Declaration of Independence were known as the radicals, a designation which has elicited little public support in American politics since that time. Their success was due to a combination of British folly and the effectiveness of the pro-independence forces in undermining the positions of the moderates and conservatives.

Britain's policies of "taxation without representation," the stationing of English and German soldiers on American soil, blockades of colonial ports and refusal to acknowledge

The Carter Style Of Activism

WASHINGTON - Jimmy Carter's record as governor Georgia is a mixed bag.

In his four years, hemade a strong showing on social and environmental programs -some highly regarded, some controversial. He won high marks for opening up government procedures up and down the line, and for patrohage-free appointments to court and

But on the issues Carter emphasized most heavily in emphasized most nearity in campaigning for the presidency — efficiency in government rooting out waste, controlling spending — his record leaves nuch to be desired.

During Jimmy Carter's

tenure, government spending in Georgia increased 50 per cent. The number of state employes rose 24 per cent. The state debt jumped 22 per cent — that is, by more than $300 million. All this by official figures.

Carter did apparently abolish 278 of Georgia's 300 state agen-cies as he claims. But this reporter has been unable to find evidence that this Carter reorevidence that this Carter reor-ganization saved money or increased efficiency.

There are some who argue that Carter's collecting of numerous small agencies under a few huge umbrellas reduced effectiveness and creativity and balloned bureaucratic rigidity, just as the lumping of a wide collection of bureaus into one federal department in Washington resulted in the unwieldy Department of Health, Education and Welfare. And as the melding of War and Navy Departments into the giant Pentagon-housed Department of Defense has helped create a bureaucracy that one extremely capable former deputy secre-tary of Defense has termed completely unmanagemble.

Carter did, however, save
Georgia money by securing significantly higher interest on state funds collected as taxes but not yet aperit. Carter says money formerly had been ed in friendly bunks at low interest as political favors.

There seems to be little question, even in the minds of his enemies, that Corter as governor fought for lough communer-protection laws, for stronger Dunning remaining contents for the retarded, for the apprending of prison rehabilitation programs and for expanded programs aiding drug addicts and al-cohelics, He favored, and saw enacted, a law requiring most candidates for state office to report in detail contributions and spending in their cam-

Carter bucked the establish-ment of a state agency to provide mortgages to families unable to secure hossing funds in the open market and sup-ported a series of bills which gave wider and stronger enforcement power to Georgia's en-vironmental agencies.

Governor Carter also backed and signed into law bills which extended the use of electronic surveillance for a number of crimes, including extertion and

Carter took a tourn stringe of dealthig in cocaine, herein and morphine — favoring and signing a bill providing mandatory life sentence for a second finding of guilt. In this same measure he backed softer penalties for those caught with small amounts of marijuana. He supported the death penalty for a number of offences, including armed rob-bery, murder and rape under some circumstances.

In a more controversial area. Carter supported and signed into law a measure which would permit a woman and her physician to agree on an abortion in the first half year of

In sum. Carter was an activist overnor. He increased spending. He introduced new programs and expanded others. He upped the role of government. Whether this is good or had depends on your personal viewpoint.

Conservatives And Defense

Ronald Reagan has been campaigning hard and effectively on the defense issue, but conservative candidates like Reagan would be even more effective on defense if they were also skeptical about Pentagon proposals. conservatives Naturally desire a strong military as being clearly essential to our national survival. Presumably Ramsey Clark; running for the Senate in New York, promises to cut $30 billion from the military budget on precisely the same grounds, thus appealing to the national suicide vote. It dies not necessarily follow, however, that conservatives concerned for national survival should look with benign approval upon every multi-billion dollar weapons system that our technologists come up with with. For one thing, it is simply the practical fact that millions of Americans have now pet in time in the armed services during one or another recent war. They now at first hand about waste and duplication in the military. # Our Responsibility: To Maintain Freedom

Towering above the holiday atmosphere of the Fourth of July remains the undying impulse toward freedom. Our ancestors won it for us 200 years ago. It is our responsibility to maintain it against every challenge.

A fringe of colonies along the Atlantic seaboard, peopled by refugees from tyranny, successfully warded off the clutch of the despots two centuries ago. It was a mortal challenge to the then accepted theory that rulers had divine rights.

Against warnings from the old world that America could not succeed in substituting mob rule for the orderly reign of kings, this nation did set up. secure and expand the philosophy that governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed.

Under this beneficent impulse the founding fathers divided the authority of government to prevent any department from seizing tyrannical powers. When any group in government or out of it appears to be accumulating too much power, they reasoned, the 'citizens can slap down that group with their votes. This is the genius of their

There is no better time than at the beginning of a new century to rededicate ourselves to the foresight, the hopes, the aspirations and cautions given by those who were at the birth of this nation. Their wisdom is not outdated, but sometimes it is too little

They Didn't All Buy It The First Time Around

Two hundred years is not long in the life of a nation, but to some Americans the chasm between 1776 and 1976 seems all but unbridgeable. Amid the hoopla surrounding the celebration of this country's 200th birthday, there is concern that the United States has forgotten its revolutionary origins and, like Great Britain in the 18th century, become the backer of the status quo or even of reaction. What, it is asked, has happened to those noble sentiments expressed in the Declaration of Independence?

The Declaration, which the Continental Congress ordered to be "authenticated and printed" on July 4, 1776, may well be the most radical political document ever written. It holds that all men are endowed with certain "unalientable rights" and that governments derive their "just powers" from the consent of the governed.

The main purpose of the Declaration was not so much to sanction rebellion against established governments that deny their subjects the rights to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. It was, in the opinion of historian Carl Becker, something of a public-relations ploy. "The primary purpose of the Declaration was not to declare independence but to proclaim to the world the reasons for declaring independence. It was intended as a formal justification of an act already accomplished."

The men who lobbied for acceptance of the Declaration of Independence were known as the radicals, a designation which has elicited little public support in American politics since that time. Their success was due to a combination of British folly and the effectiveness of the pro-independence forces in undermining the positions of the moderates and conservatives.

Britain's policies of "taxation without representation," the stationing of English and German soldiers on American soil, blockades of colonial ports and refusal to acknowledge

colonial grievances increased separatist sentiment. British intransigence and the outbreak of hostilities made it difficult for those favoring reconciliation with the mother country to win much sympathy. Their reaction to a resolution introduced by Richard Henry Lee on June 7, 1776, that "these united colonies are, and of right ought to be, free and independent states" was one of delay. Some, like Robert R. Livingston of New York, hoped that a postponement in declaring independence would give England time to dispatch peace commissioners with acceptable proposals for reconciliation. The moderates won a three-week delay for a vote on Lee's resolution. The next day, June 11, the Continental Congress approved the appointment of a committee to prepare a declaration of independence. Four members of that committee - John Adams, Benjamin Franklin, Thomas Jefferson and Roger Sherman - were strong proponents of independence. Livingston was the lone opponent. According to historian Thomas Fleming, 33year-old Thomas Jefferson was assigned the task of writing the Declaration through a process of elimination. Franklin would have been given the job "if he did not have a lovalist son under arrest in New Jer-Adams, recognizing his "vast unpopularity" and the "deep suspicion" with which many delegates viewed New Englanders, deferred to Jefferson. Livingston did not want independence and "Sherman was no

The vote for independence on July 1 came as a shock to the radicals. Only nine states endorsed separation: New York abstained, Delaware was split and Pennsylvania and South Carolina voted against the resolution. During that night, pro-independence forces conducted an intense lobbying campaign to sway recalcitrant delegates. They succeeded in persuading representatives from South Carolina and Pennsylvania to change their votes or not to vote at all. The final vote, taken on July 2, was 12-0 with New York abstaining.

During the next two days, the Continental Congress debated the Declaration, ordering it to be 'authenticated and printed" as "A Declaration by the Representatives of the United States in General Congress Assembled" on July 4. After New York's adherence to the resolution for independence on July 19, it was resolved that the document be engrossed on parchment with the title, "The Unanimous Declaration of the Thirteen United States of America. The ideas that the Declaration "submitted to a candid world" - that governments derive their "just powers from the consent of the governed" and that subjects have certain inalienable rights that governments may not infringe upon - were hardly original. They had been expressed by philosophers for centuries and were the basis of the natural rights philosophy that enjoyed such wide appeal during the 17th and 18th centuries. But it was the Americans, historian Henry Steele Commager wrote, who "for the first time in history. translated this concept of natural rights into constitutional guarantees.'

The Carter Style Of Activism

WASHINGTON - Jimmy Carter's record as governor of Georgia is a mixed bag. In his four years, hemade a strong showing on social and environmental programs some highly regarded, some controversial. He won high marks for opening up government procedures up and down the line, and for patronage-free appointments to court and cabinet posts.

But on the issues Carter emphasized most heavily in campaigning for the presidency - efficiency in government rooting out waste, controlling spending - his record leaves much to be desired.

During Jimmy Carter's tenure, government spending in Georgia increased 50 per cent. The number of state employes rose 24 per cent. The state debt jumped 23 per cent - that is, by more than $200 million. All this by official figures.

Carter did apparently abolish 278 of Georgia's 300 state agencies as he claims. But this reporter has been unable to find evidence that this Carter reorganization saved money or increased efficiency.

There are some who argue that Carter's collecting of numerous small agencies under a few huge umbrellas reduced effectiveness and creativity and ballooned bureaucratic rigidity, just as the lumping of a wide collection of bureaus into one federal department in Washington resulted in the unwieldy Department of Health, Education and Welfare. And as the melding of War and Navy Departments into the giant Pentagon-housed Department of Defense has helped create a bureaucracy that one extremely capable former deputy secretary of Defense has termed completely unmanageable.

Carter did, however, save Georgia money by securing significantly higher interest on state funds collected as taxes but not yet spent. Carter says the money formerly had been placed in friendly banks at low interest as political favors There seems to be little ques tion, even in the minds of his enemies, that Carter as governor fought for tough consumer protection laws, for stronger banking regulations. He pushed for community centers for the retarded, for the upgrading of prison rehabilitation programs and for expanded programs aiding drug addicts and alcoholics. He favored, and saw enacted, a law requiring most candidates for state office to report in detail contributions and spending in their campaigns.

Carter backed the establishment of a state agency to provide mortgages to families unable to secure housing funds in the open market and supported a series of bills which gave wider and stronger enforcement power to Georgia's environmental agencies.

Governor Carter also backed and signed into law bills which extended the use of electronic surveillance for a number of crimes, including extortion and

Carter took a tough stance on dealing in cocaine, heroin and morphine - favoring and siging a bill providing mandatory life sentence for a second finding of guilt. In this same measure he backed softer penalties for those caught with small amounts of marijuana. He supported the death penalty for a number of offenses, including armed robbery, murder and rape under some circumstances

In a more controversial area. Carter supported and signed into law a measure which would permit a woman and her physician to agree on an abortion in the first half year of pregnancy.

In sum, Carter was an activist governor. He increased spending. He introduced new programs and expanded others. He upped the role of government. Whether this is good or bad depends on your personal viewpoint.

Conservatives And Defense

Ronald Reagan has been campaigning hard and effectively on the defense issue, but conservative candidates like Reagan would be even more effective on defense if they were also skeptical about Pentagon proposals.

Naturally conservatives desire a strong military as being clearly essential to our national survival. Presumably Ramsey Clark, running for the Senate in New York, promises to cut $30 billion from the mili-, tary budget on precisely the same grounds, thus appealing to the national suicide vote. It does not necessarily follow. however, that conservatives concerned for national survival should look with benign approval upon every multibillion dollar weapons system that our technologists come up with.

For one thng, it is simply the practical fact that millions of Americans have now put in time in the armed services during one or another recent war. They now at first hand about waste and duplication in the military. They are likely to be aware that our fighting units have the largest logistical "tails," or nonfighting support forces of any army in the world. They know about the fondness of the top brass for billion-dollar toys. Without bothering to go into the technical details, the average American voter tends to be almost as skeptical of the Pentagon as he is of the rest of the bureaucracy. Consider the new B-1 super-sonic bomber project. It may be that the nation cannot survive without the B-1, but the thing is devilishly expensive. Now in prototype phase, it will cost $900 million plus just to begin production. The projected cost of the fleet of 200 B-1 planes has doubled since the first estimate, and now stands at $22 billion. From past experience, we know that still another doubling in cost is only too likely.

But the B-1 supersonic bomber is merely one of the enormously expensive weapons systems now looming before us. The new Trident submarines will cost at least a billion dollars apiece. Then there is the new Cruise Missile, evidently an amazing weapon. And the MARV warhead system, an updated version of the old MIRV. The huge Rickover nuclearpowered aircraft carriers will cost more than a billion dollars apiece. Those are the super-weapons. We also project a new army tank, a new interceptor plane, more conventional naval craft, and so forth. Maybe each and every one of these items is crucial to the national survival and to the fate of the West, but surely at least some skepticism is called for. There are honest and knowledgeable people who argue, for example, that the new nuclearpowered carriers are too expensive and too vulnerable, and that the real reason they have been projected is Admiral Hyman Rickover's personal clout in Congress.

FOUNDERS RECOGNIZED FRAILTY OF STATESMEN

National Structure Holds For 200 Years

by GEORGE W. CORNELL

AP Beligion Writer NEW YORK (AP) - A tough realism, born of an ancient Biblical idea, underlay the founding of these United States ings, including the most elevated statesmen of government, can go wrong.

They were regarded, in Scriptural terms, as subject to le's an old, old notion, and the term is not at all fashionable these days, however extensive the problem itself; but awareness of it tempered the building blocks of the nation.

On its 200th birthday this nd, the national structure still holds, and much of the credit for it is given to the original scathing view of the human condition.

Historians say it's what distinguished the American system and made it last through all sorts of aberrations and upheavals, while other struggles for liberation often relapsed into tyranny. In such cases, the masses took a rosy, trusting view of their leaders, whose authority subsequently turned repressive. But the American founders viewed those put in positions of power with a dour.

That note of skepticism about the human tendency was writ-ten into the U.S. Constitution, with its checks and balances giving each branch of govern-ment — the president, the Congress, the courts — restraining reins on the others.

THE BIBLE No. 246. Assyria Threatens Judah

During the 14th year of the reign of King Hezekiah, the king of Assyria, Sennacherib, conquered the walled cities of Judah. Then he sent an emissary with a great army from Lachish to confer with King Hezekiah in Jerusalem. Eliakim, Shebna and Joah formed a truce team to meet with the Assyrian emissary, Rabshakeh.

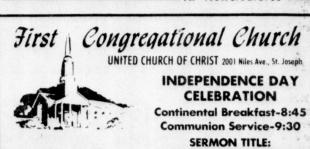

Rabshakeh encouraged the men to surrender; he boasted that nothing could save Jerusalem from the mighty Assyrian army. "Thus saith the king, Let not Hezekiah deceive you; for he shall not be able to deliver you. . . . Harken not to Hezekiah, for thus saith the king of Assyria, Make an agreement with me by a present, and come out to me: and eat ye every one of his vine, and every one of his fig tree, and drink ye every one the waters of his own cistern. Until I come and take you away to a land like your own land, a land of corn and wine, a land of bread and vineyards." (Isaiah 36:14-17)

"But they held their peace, and answered him not a word: for the king's commandment was, saying, Answer him not." (Isaiah 36:21)

ADD OKRA

If your family likes okra, they'll enjoy having it added to tomato soup.

No one ever taught me about the flag. When I was five years old, I was in a dance recital. My costume was a silver leotard. Attached to it at the shoulders and wrists was a flag. During the last few bars, I spread my arms revealing 48 stars on a field of white. The crowd went crazy cheering. I learned that a flag could make you look like you had talent.

A few years later at a baseball game in Cincinnati, two men were calling one another names that would starch your underwear. One said Ted Kluszewski hit like a girl and the other guy threatened to rearrange his nose. Just then, they hoisted the flag and both of them stood with their hats over their hearts. I learned that a flag could break up a fight.

During the second World War. my Grandma sent her son to war. I never saw her cry when he left, when he wrote, or when we talked about him, but one afternoon when she thought no one was watching, she went to the front window and put a little flag on the sill. There were flags all up and down the street in the windows. I learned that a flag could bring tears to the eyes of people who didn't usually cry. When I was in New York once.

I saw a group of demonstrators protesting the war. They lit a match to the flag. I watched in horror as the silk stripes curled in flames because I knew what was coming. Within minutes, there would be a bolt of lightning and thunder to strike them all dead. Nothing happened. The earth didn't part. The sky didn't fall. And the VFW was open regular hours. I learned that a flag could touch the ground and life could go on.

Later, I was to learn that people would make underwear out of the flag, keyrings and toilet seats. The flag was a successful commercial venture. I would learn that you wouldn't think about the flag for a long time, then you'd see it being raised slowly over a gold medal winner at the Olympics and you'd get up out of your chair quickly and say, "Anyone want a beer while I'm up?" and go to the kitchen to hide your I'm still learning about flag.

It's an enigma to me. I've known it all my life. It's so familiar, yet it occasionally touches a nerve that excites to the point where I square my shoulders and say to a perfect stranger at the UN, "See that one with the red and white stripes and the blue stars? That's my country.'

Sen. Jack Faxon, D-Detroit, chairman of the Senate Education Committee, saw his proposals to revise the funding formula dumped for the second straight year

Faxon's approach would have given more money to pupils in grades one-through-three, on the theory that it would provide a better start in education and would require less remedial work later.

In 1976-77, school districts will be guaranteed $49.90 for each student per mill for the first 20 mills, and $39.60 per student for millage between 21 and 28 mills.

The bill included a $34.6 million payment to the Detroit employes retirement system. But that is expected to suffer a veto from the governor. who claims a contingency fund of that amount held by the system can pick up the payment

The state has already been sued for alleged undersupport of teacher retirement systems. Lawmakers did not want to provide further ammunition for critics who claim the state is not providing enough money to keep the systems fiscally sound.

LANSING, Mich. (AP) Faced by tight revenues, hoping the economy will continue to improve, the Michigan Legislature on Friday approved a $3.42 hillion budget which is basically in line with the gover-

The budget, which covers the t2 months beginning Oct. 1, is up 9.8 per cent from this year. Nonetheless, some lawmakers say the budget ignores unmet needs. Others say the budget will result in future spending cutbacks, tax increases or both.

Legislature OKs School Aid Bill; Increase Slim

Michigan schools will get a meager 4.4 per cent increase in state aid for the next fiscal year under a $727 million bill approved Friday by the legisla-

For the third straight year, funding in the 12 months beginning Oct. 1 would be under the "guaranteed yield" formula. The formula guarantees a cer-

LANSING, Mich. (AP) - tain level of combined state and local funding per student for each mill of local taxes levied.

An alternative proposal which would have based spending on the actual cost of personnel and programs went down to defeat. It would have given more money for students in lower grades.

School aid spending will total $1.48 billion when restricted fund money is added. The general fund appropriation is up from $694.6 million last year, when total spending was $1.36 billion

Sen. Jack Faxon, D-Detroit, chairman of the Senate Education Committee, saw his proposals to revise the funding formula dumped for the second straight year.

Faxon's approach would have given more money to pupils in grades one-through-three, on the theory that it would provide a better start in education and would require less remedial

In 1976-77, school districts will be guaranteed $49.90 for each student per mill for the first 20 mills, and $39.60 per student for millage between 21 and 28 mills.

The bill included a $34.6 million payment to the Detroit school employes retirement system. But that is expected to suffer a veto from the governor, who claims a contingency fund of that amount held by the system can pick up the payment.

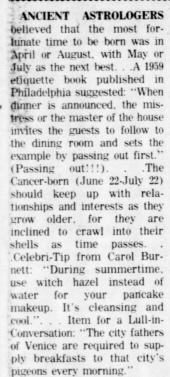

The state has already been sued for alleged undersupport of teacher retirement systems. Lawmakers did not want to provide further ammunition for critics who claim the state is not providing enough money to keep the systems fiscally sound.

$3.42 Billion Budget Passes

By MALCOLM JOHNSON Associated Press Writer

LANSING, Mich. (AP) -Faced by tight revenues, but hoping the economy will continue to improve, the Michigan Legislature on Friday approved a $3.42 billion budget which is basically in line with the governor's wishes.

The budget, which covers the 12 months beginning Oct. 1, is up 9.8 per cent from this year.

Nonetheless, some lawmakers say the budget ignores unmet needs. Others say the budget will result in future spending cutbacks, tax increases or both.

Sen. Earl Nelson - who dropped his threat to push a tax-hike bill out of committee said the budget "is balanced on the most untenable and ridiculous mean's I've ever seen. Human need is being disregarded in this 'balanced'

The budget is technically $47 million over Milliken's recommendation. But the legislature placed in easy veto position a $34.6 million payment to the Detroit school employes retirement system.

The elimination of that item would bring the budget to $3.387

College Fund Bills Pass Legislature

From ASSOCIATED PRESS

Lake Michigan college would receive $1.3 million and Southwestern Michigan college would receive $1.4 million in state funds for the new fiscal year under legislation headed for Gov. William Milliken. The LMC appropriation is unchanged from funding for the 12 months ending June 30, but SMC funding is $200,000 higher

The legislature has approved $492 million for the state's fouryear colleges - up $47 million from current spending - and $101.5 million for junior colleges.

The $492 million bill for four-year colleges and universities was $16.4 million more than Milliken recommended. It won final legislative approval Friday in the House, 88-10. The measure does not specify how each college should spend its money. But it asks for an accounting before the next annual general fund appropriation is adopted.

Therefore, Ferris State College will be able to use part of its state grant to fund its optometry school. The University of Michigan at Ann Arbor again got the single larges state grant -$110.7 million, up from $106.6 million.

Michigan State University got $107 million, up from about $100 million, and Wayne State University got $73.7 million, up from provide a slight surplus.

Gerald Miller, director of the Department of Management and Budget, pronounced Republican Gov. William Milliken's blessings over the appropriation program. Miller predicted the state will make it through the fiscal year without having to cut spending as it has done the past two years. He added that the governor believes this can be done without a tax increase.

This year's general fund spending totaled some $3.086 billion, after a series of midyear austerity measures. When federal and restricted funds are added to the new budget, 1976-77 spending for the state will exceed $7 billion.

With the final dispute settled about 8:30 p.m., the legislature broke for a summer recess and re-election campaigns for House members. They will return

Dunes Bill On Way To Milliken

LANSING, Mich. (AP) - A bill aimed at protecting the sand dunes along Michigan's Great Lakes shoreline received legislative approval final Friday.

The House passed the measure 89-1 and sent it to the governor shortly after it was approved in the Senate, 26-5. The Senate made slight changes in the measure as passed by the House last November.

Gov. William Milliken said the legislation "marks an important milestone in assuring protection of one of Michigan's most unique natural resources

... (It) will help assure that future generations of Michigan citizens will be able to experience the benefits that our sand dune areas provide."

The bill is a major victory for environmental organizations, which contended the sand dunes were endangered by indiscriminate mining, mainly along Lake Michigan. Under the bill, the Department of Natural Resources would issue permits for indus-trial mining of sand within two miles of normal high-water marks on lakes Michigan, Superior and Huron.

Mining operators would have to post bonds in most cases and file environmental impact statements including plans for restoration.

Sponsored bу Senate Minority Leader Dennis Cawthorne, R-Manistee, the bill prohibits mining of "barrier dunes" — the first dune on a shoreline — unless the DNR grants an exemption.

The bill includes a surveillance fee to be levied on operaturs to provide the DNR with funds to enforce the law. The Senate reduced the fee from 1½ cents to 1 cent for each ton of mined sand, which would produce almost $50,000 a year. The DNR could deny a permit to mine sand if extraction would do irreparable harm to a dune. would The dengrement also would survey Michigan sand dunes to determine those needing protection.

Mining companies now are regulated only by local zoning

In that period, Consumers Power customers placed 68.5 million square feet of 6-inch insulation in their homes to reduce heat loss through ceilings. The average cost for a "do-it-your-selfer" was $110 for a pre-1940 home (of about 800 square feet insulation) and $150 for a post-1940 home (of about 1.200 square feet insulation). MPSC figures show. The average yearly saving for a pre-1940 home will be about 863 and for a post-1940 home about $40. The amount of time to pay back the insulation cost in money saved through insulation is 1.7 years for a pre-1940 home

"A review of the statistics indicates that Consumers Power Company has the most cost-efficient program. ..." Joel A. Sharkey of the MPSC staff reported to the commission earlier this mouth. The company's expense was for advertising, administering the program and financing 140 low-interest contracts. Consumers Power, Michigan Consolidated Gas Co., Michigan Gas Utilities Co., Michigan Power Co. and Southeas-tern Michigan Gas, Co. have home insulation programs authorized by the commission.

In the 24 months ending Dec. 31, 1975, almost 170,000 homes were insulated, Sharkey reported. The program began with a study requested of Michigan Consolidated by former MPSC Chairman William G. Rosenberg. The study led to authorization of the program through proposals submitted by the utilities.

Information about home insulation (and no-interest or lowinterest financing available by authority of the MPSC) can be obtained from Consumers Power Company's energy consulting services representative at any company office.

An A-Frame With Spaciousness

By LARRY FARNSWORTH

Excitement, atmosphere and spaciousness are usually costly, but this house provides all three, plus an exceptional amount of versatility, yet is surprisingly inexpensive to

Its A-frame styling and imaginative interior design deserve credit ofor this ac-

The open space arrangement of entry, living room, dining room and kitchen contribute to the spaciousness of each, permitting greater freedom of movement and decor and, as a bonus, cutting interior finishing

Note, also, the large and welorganized storage area and the kitchen, bath and laundry arrangement.

Upstairs are two spacious bedrooms, both with beamed ceilings. The front bedroom also has its own private balcony which echoes the lines of the porch beneath, adding symmetry to the front elevation and sheltering the main entrance.

59,000 Homes Add Insulation

JACKSON, Mich. - A total of more than 59,000 homes were insulated in a program of Consumers Power Co. from Nov. 1973 through Dec. 31, 1975, with a projected conservation of 1.3 million cubic feet of natural gas, according to a report received this month by the company from the Michigan Public Service

In that period, Consumers Power customers placed 68.5 million square feet of 6-inch insulation in their homes to reduce eat loss through ceilings. The average cost for a "do-it-your selfer" was $110 for a pre-1940 home (of about 800 square feet insulation) and $150 for a post-1940 home (of about 1,200 square feet insulation), MPSC figures show. The average yearly saving for a pre-1940 home will be about $63 and for a post-1940 home about $40. The amount of time to pay back the insulation cost in money saved through insulation is 1.7 years for a pre-1940 home and 3.7 years for a post-1940 home, the MPSC reported.

"A review of the statistics indicates that Consumers Power Company has the most cost-efficient program. . .," Joel A. Sharkey of the MPSC staff reported to the commission earlier this month. The company's expense was for advertising, administering the program and financing 140 low-interest contracts. Consumers Power, Michigan Consolidated Gas Co., Michigan Gas Utilities Co., Michigan Power Co. and Southeastern Michigan Gas Co. have home insulation programs authorized by the commission.

In the 24 months ending Dec. 31, 1975, almost 170,000 homes were insulated, Sharkey reported. The program began with a study requested of Michigan Consolidated by former MPSC Chairman William G. Rosenberg. The study led to authorization of the program through proposals submitted by the utilities.

Information about home insulation (and no-interest or lowinterest financing available by authority of the MPSC) can be obtained from Consumers Power Company's energy consulting services representative at any company office.

Tiger Rookie Developing Into Slugger

But he appears to have finally developed a hitting consistency that should buoy the enthusiasm of Tiger lans and officials alike

June, the 21-year-old smacked seven homers. He had driven in at least one run in 11 of the last 15 games, knocking in 18 runs total in the span. His 34 runs batted in put him second on the team behind Rusty Stanb's 43.

"He's starting to get his feet on the ground," said Tiger coach Dick Tracewski, who has helped him come out of his slump with a few batting tips — even though "Trixie" himself was never much of a hitter in

"I told myself I had to go the "How mysen r may to go mo-other way." Thompson said. "So I hit a couple home runs to the opposite field. Now I'm starting to get inside pitches again and that's what I like."

Thompson's average was in the 400s for the first couple weeks after he was called up from the Tigers' Triple-A farm club at Evansville. Then if started to drop off to around the .216 level. In early June it started rising again and by the end of the month it was at .238.

Tracewski said Thompson had a problem of overswinging. "He has so much power he doesn't have to swing that hard," Tracewski said. "He's a pretty smart kid. He doesn't have to be coached that much. If he doesn't hit for a day he wants to hit extra/batting practice."

During his slump Thompson was drawing plenty of walks and wasn't swinging very often. He has a good eye for balls and strikes, but if a player doesn't swing he's not going to get

"He was guessing like crazy. Tracewski said, "...He'd look for one pitch and get another." "Now I feel I'm more aggres-sive," offered Thompson, "I

"He can play defense," Tracewski said, "He knows defense and understands it. All you have to do is tell him something once."

Death Penalty OK --With New Strings

WASHINGTON (AP) — The supreme Court has upheld the death penalty in some cases, but in a complex decision it also has imposed new restrictions on its use that could invalidate the law in a number of states

The court ruled 5 to 4 Friday that capital punishment laws must provide standards for the imposition of the ultimate

It also said the laws must provide some method, such as a separate trial on the penalty issue, by which the individual criminal and the circumstances of the crime could be con-

On this basis, it struck down measures in Louisiana and North Carolina that made the penalty mandatory for several kinds of murder.

By a separate 7-2 vote, the court ruled that the death penalty is not in itself constitu-tionally prohibited. It specifically upheld capital punishment laws in Florida, Georgia and Texas, which are not mandatory and do provide standards for the penalty's im-

An Associated Press survey indicated that 25 states have some kind of mandatory death penalty laws. There also is a federal law making death man-datory for fatal airplane hijackings.

The measures vary widely, however, and the court said laws making death mandatory for an "extremely narrow" ca-tegory of homicides might be permissable. The example given was murder by a prisoner serving a life term.

Texas Atty. Gen. John Hill said in Austin, Tex., "we are not going to see executions carried out anytime soon." But Calif. Atty. Gen. Evelle

Younger commented, "I hope we can get down to where there is an orderly carrying out of executions in the near future."

Charlotte, N.C., prosecutor Joe Freeman Britt predicted

North Carolina would "go under whatever rules they've set up and move in that direction." Anthony Amsterdam, an NAACP Legal Defense Fund at torney who argued against the death nenalty in the high court. said the fund would ask the court to reconsider. The court said the "constitutional vice of mandatory death sentence statutes" is "lack of focus on the circumstances of the particular offense character and propensities of the offender.

It also said the Louisiana and North Carolina laws had failed to eliminate the "standardless jury discretion" that the court condemned in its 1972 decision striking down the capital punishment laws then in effect. Chief Justice Warren E.

Burger and Justices Byron R. White, Harry A. Blackmun and William H. Rebnquist dissent-

In an opinion written by White, they said death penalty laws passed since the 1972 decision are "solemn judg-ments, reasonably based, that imposition of the death penalty will save the lives of innocent

The various mandatory laws will presumably have to be tested through court cases in the coming months to determine whether they meet the stan-dards laid down by the justices.

The laws that do not make the death penalty mandatory generally call for judges and juries to consider specific agoravating and mitigating cir. cumstances in arriving at the penalty.

The court said it would "al-most certainly" not be enough only aggravating circumstances.

"A jury must be allowed to consider on the basis of all relevant evidence not only why a death sentence should be imposed, but also why it should not be imposed," the court said.

The main opinion declaring that the death penalty does not invariably violate the Constitution was written by Justice Pot-

Retired Justice William O. Douglas, whom Stevens suceeded, also voted to strike,

The members of the court expressed their views on the five state laws in 24 separate and statements

FIRST TO BAR IT Michigan Leaders Oppose Death Law

By PATRICK CONNOLLY

Associated Press Writer
LANSING, Mich. (AP) —
James Spivey says Michigan would have executed him over 40 years ago on a birn murder rap if the state allowed capital punishment

Spivey, 63, is now the state-paid ombundsman go-between for Michigan legislators and prison inmates. He spent 36 years behind bars in Southern Michigan Prison for murder in the slaying of a bartender dur-ing a 1934 holdup.

Police accused him of driving the getaway car, a charge he always denied. He insisted he was elsewhere at the time.

His sentence was commuted by Gov. William Milliken and Spivey became a free man in upheld the death penalties of three states Friday, Spivey said, "Those justices are a little outmoded. They turned around and made barbarians of our whole society. There is no way in the world to justify capital punishment and at the same time say ve believe in God.

Michigan outlawed capital punishment in 1846, becoming the first government in the English-speaking world to do says Eugene Wanger of ansing, co-chairman Michigan Committee Against Capital Punishment.

Milliken said he is "unequivocally opposed to capital punishment on philosophical and moral grounds." Noting Michigan repealed the death penalty 130 years ago, he said, "It would be regrettable if we took a backward step toward the death penalty now.

"On one hand, whatever mis-take society makes in condemning an innocent person becomes irremedial. On the other hand, the death penalty has never been proven to be a deterrent to crime," Milliken

Michigan Supreme Court Chief Justice Thomas G. Kavanagh said, "I could never justify (the death penalty) as a punishment, since in my lexicon, taking somebody's life is not punishment at alt. It's much beyond punishment. It transcends punishment. In the aftermath of the court ruling, Rep. Kirby Holmes, another last week in RUtica, said Friday he will persons were killed.

launch another petition drive for the 1978 election to re-establish death penalty in Michigan. Holmes beaded an unsucce ful drive for capital punishment in 1974. Capital punishment is forbidden in the Michigan Constitutution and could be calized only with approval of Michigan voters. State Corrections Director

Perry Johnson, who has expressed concern about vercrowding behind bars and the rise in crime, said "pure vengence" is a major motive for capital punishment.

Of the 395 convicted firstdegree murderers paroled in Michigan between 1938 and 1974, Johnson said, not one was returned to prison for commit-ting another first-degree nurder.

NILES - Western Michigan Corp., of Niles, bank holding firm that owns the First National Bank of Southwestern Michigan, has been informed its application to acquire the capital stock of First National Bank of Cassopolis has been denied.

The Federal Reserve Board notified the holding firm this week of the denial, according to Donald F. Walter, Western Michigan

Walter said he was advised by phone that the Reserve Board's denial was based upon what it termed an adverse concentration of banking assets in the market area served by the Cassopolis bank and First National Bank of Southwestern Michigan. Economies of operation and increased ability to serve the market were purposes behind the plan, Walter said. Plans to link the two banks under a holding company were reported by officials of the two banks as far back as December of 1973. It was proposed then to form the holding company, which in turn would acquire the capital stock, and ownership, of the two banks.

Walter said an appeal to the adverse ruling by the Federal Reserve is possible, but that Western Michigan Corp. officials would review the context of the decision before deciding what ac-

Death Penalty OK --With New Strings

By W. DALE NELSON Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Supreme Court has upheld the death penalty in some cases, but in a complex decision it also has imposed new restrictions on its use that could invalidate the law in a number of states.

The court ruled 5 to 4 Friday that capital punishment laws must provide standards for the imposition of the ultimate penalty.

It also said the laws must provide some method, such as a separate trial on the penalty issue, by which the individual criminal and the circumstances of the crime could be considered.

On this basis, it struck down measures in Louisiana and North Carolina that made the death penalty mandatory for several kinds of murder.

By a separate 7-2 vote, the court ruled that the death penalty is not in itself constitutionally prohibited. specifically upheld capital punishment laws in Florida, Georgia and Texas, which are not mandatory and do provide standards for the penalty's imposition.

An Associated Press survey indicated that 25 states have some kind of mandatory death penalty laws. There also is a federal law making death mandatory for fatal airplane hijackings.

The measures vary widely. however, and the court said laws making death mandatory for an "extremely narrow" category of homicides might be permissable. The example given was murder by a prisoner serving a life term.

Texas Atty. Gen. John Hill said in Austin, Tex., "we are not going to see executions carried out anytime soon But Calif. Atty. Gen. Evelle

Younger commented, "I hope we can get down to where there is an orderly carrying out of executions in the near future." Charlotte, N.C., prosecutor

Joe Freeman Britt predicted North Carolina would "go under whatever rules they've set up and move in that direction." Anthony Amsterdam, an NAACP Legal Defense Fund attorney who argued against the death penalty in the high court, said the fund would ask the court to reconsider.

The court said the "constitutional vice of mandatory death sentence statutes" is "lack of focus on the circumstances of the particular offense and character and propensities of the offender.

It also said the Louisiana and North Carolina laws had failed to eliminate the "standardless jury discretion" that the court condemned in its 1972 decision striking down the capital punishment laws then in effect.

Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justices Byron R. White, Harry A. Blackmun and William H. Rehnquist dissent-

In an opinion written by White, they said death penalty laws passed since the 1972 decision are "solemn judgments, reasonably based, that imposition of the death penalty will save the lives of innocent persons. The various mandatory laws will presumably have to be tested through court cases in the coming months to determine whether they meet the standards laid down by the justices.

The laws that do not make the death penalty mandatory generally call for judges and juries to consider specific aggravating and mitigating circumstances in arriving at the penalty.

The court said it would "almost certainly" not be enough to allow the jury to consider only aggravating circumstances.

"A jury must be allowed to consider on the basis of all relevant evidence not only why a death sentence should be imposed, but also why it should not be imposed," the court said.

The main opinion declaring that the death penalty does not invariably violate the Constitution was written by Justice Pot-

In striking down the two mandatory laws, Brennan, and Marshall were joined by Stewart and by Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr., who voted to uphold the laws in 1972, and Justice John Paul Stevens, who joined the court during its current Retired Justice William O. Douglas, whom Stevens succeeded, also voted to strike down the 1972 laws.

The members of the court expressed their views on the five state laws in 24 separate opinions and statements comprising 212 pages.

FIRST TO BAR IT Michigan Leaders Oppose Death Law

By PATRICK CONNOLLY Associated Press Writer

LANSING, Mich. (AP) -James Spivey says Michigan would have executed him over 40 years ago on a bum murder rap if the state allowed capital punishment.

Spivey, 63, is now the statepaid ombundsman go-between for Michigan legislators and prison inmates. He spent 36 years behind bars in Southern Michigan Prison for murder in the slaying of a bartender during a 1934 holdup.

Police accused him of driving the getaway car, a charge he always denied. He insisted he was elsewhere at the time.

His sentence was commuted by Gov. William Milliken and Spivey became a free man in

When the U.S. Supreme Court upheld the death penalties of three states Friday, Spivey said, "Those justices are a little outmoded. They turned around and made barbarians of our whole society. There is no way in the world to justify capital punishment and at the same time say we believe in God.

Michigan outlawed capital punishment in 1846, becoming the first government in the English-speaking world to do so, says Eugene Wanger of Lansing, co-chairman of the Michigan Committee Against Capital Punishment.

Milliken said he 'unequivocally opposed to capital punishment on philosophical and moral grounds." Noting Michigan repealed the death penalty 130 years ago, he said, 'It would be regrettable if we took a backward step toward the death penalty now

"On one hand, whatever mistake society makes in condemning an innocent person becomes irremedial. On the other hand, the death penalty has never been proven to be a deterrent to crime," Milliken

Michigan Supreme Court Chief Justice Thomas G. Kayanagh said, "I could never justify (the death penalty) as a punishment, since in my lexicon, taking somebody's life is not punishment at all. It's much beyond punishment. It transcends punishment.

launch another petition drive for the 1978 election to re-establish the death penalty in Michigan.

Holmes headed an unsuccessful drive for capital punishment in 1974. Capital punishment is forbidden in the Michigan Constitutution and could be legalized only with approval of Michigan voters.

State Corrections Director Perry Johnson, who has expressed concern about overcrowding behind bars and the rise in crime, said "pure vengence" is a major motive for capital punishment

Of the 395 convicted firstdegree murderers paroled in Michigan between 1938 and 1974, Johnson said, not one was returned to prison for committing another first-degree murder.

TO ALL INTERESTED AGEN-CIES, GROUPS AND PER-SONS:

The above-named Township proposes to request the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development to release Federal funds under Title 1 of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 (PL 93-383) to be used for the 1976 Community Development Program consisting of the following projects and activi-(a) The rehabilitation of 59

(e) The project will make no significant increased demand on public services. It will create no pollution impacts, nor will it require an irreversible or irretrievable commitment of natural sources.

(f) The project is the best among competing alternatives to accomplish the intended objective. (g) The nature, magnitude and extent of any environmental impacts of the project, whether beneficial or adverse, are such that there will be no significant effect on the environment.

Quiz: How Much Should You Reveal About Yourself?

FOR JIMMY CARTER

What led you to apply to Annapolis, and what led you to resign from the Navy after your seven years of active duty?—D. J. Sullivan, Brighton, Mass.

 I had an uncle in the Navy, and when I was a boy I got postcards from him from all sorts of exotic places. So I guess I grew up with the dream of going to Annapolis. In 1953 my father was dying of cancer, and the Navy gave me leave to be home with him. Partly of necessity, partly through a reexamination of my own life and the direction it was taking, I began to wonder if I should spend my life engaged in war, even if I could rationalize it as the prevention of war. So I resigned my commission at the end of 1953 and went into the peanut business with my mother.

FOR ABE VICODA, "Fish" on TV's "Barney Miller"

What effect did growing up on New York's lower East Side have on your adult life and career?-N.J., Columbia, Mo.

• It didn't scar me for life, if that's what you're asking. If your family life is happy, the children are happy no matter where you live. We were poor and lived in a sixth-floor walk-up-and my father was a tailor. But we were happy. And my father was my biggest supporter when I told him I wanted to be an actor.

FOR ARLENE FRANCIS

During all your years on TV, what did you do if you didn't feel in the mood before a broadcast? -S.C., Daytona Beach, Fla.

• I have never felt that way in 25 years. It sounds trite, but it was always fun, never a chore. Of course, in all those years there were times when I didn't feel well, but I had to go on. So what I did was breathe deeply several times and try to get into anousing conversations with people-to take my mind off things-before going on the air. I tried to perk up. I found that usually worked.

FOR BERNNADETTE STANIS, star of "Good Times" Why do you spell your first name, BernNadette, so pecuharly?-E.H., Cocoa, Fla.

 When I was in eighth-grade history class, bored to death, I amused myself by doodling. Then I tried writing my name in different ways. I always wanted to be different, and I felt if my name was unusual, it would help. I stuck an extra capital N in the middle, liked the way it looked and kept it. My last name is really Stanislaus, but the producers chopped off the "laus" so it would fit in the "credits."

FOR RED SMITH, Pulitzer Prize-winning sports columnist Who is the greatest everyday ball player you have ever seen? The greatest pitcher?-Stephen Banks, Rockland, Mass.

 The greatest everyday ball player was Babe Ruth. The greatest pitcher was Sandy Koufax.

FOR JIM McKAY, ABC sports commentator

Is there one event that best sums up the spirit of the Olympics?—N.W., Danbury, Conn.

• Yes, the Marathon—a long and grueling race that can break a man if he isn't in top physical condition. The objective is not to win but just to finish the race. There is an enormous satisfaction to be derived from being part of a great event and, at the same time, knowing you are using your capabilities to their fullest.

FOR LEE MERIWETHER, star of "Barnaby Jones"

What do you want to be doing 10 years from now?--E.C., Santa Fe, N.M.

 Two things: Acting and playing with and spoiling my grandchild. Nobody would mind, because that's what grandmothers are for.

FOR JULIA CHILD

How do you feel about strange foods, such as shark and alligator meat?-Mrs. Dee Dayis, Havelock, N.C.

● I always try to keep an open mind-and mouth-when someone serves exotic or unfamiliar foods, such as whale steak and alligator's eyeballs. But my mouth clams up tight when I'm offered chocolate-covered ants.

FOR MR. BLACKWELL) designer

A publication of Downe Communications, Inc.

Raymond K. Mason, Chairman of the Board

You make some pretty tough statements about the women on your Ten Worst Dressed List every year. How have the women reacted?—L.F., Gardner, Alden, N.Y.

 After the first list appeared 16 years ago, Zsa Zsa Gabor threatened to sue, but she didn't. The judge would have seen I was right. Dinah Shore hasn't spoken to me since she made the list, and Phyllis Diller has been annoyed at me because she was taken off the list. Those are the only reactions strong enough to remember.

FOR THE "ASK THEM YOURSELF" EDITOR What does Truman Capote do for recreation?-G. H. Burke, Athens, Ga.

 Our reporter cornered him and asked your question. "I like to read," he said. "I hardly ever go to the theater. I hate the theater. My theater is in my mind. I've gone twice in the last two years; and I only went last time because it was the birthday of my friend's little boy, and that's what he wanted for his present." Capote did not wear a dinner jacket, but he was all in black, even to his solid shirt front. Unlike the rest of the audience, his applause was subdued. Incidentally, Capote will be on screen soon in "Murder by Death," a new movie in which he makes his acting bow. Is acting his new career? He says: "One swallow does nota summer make. All I-wanted to do was see what was on the other side of the fence. I did. Now I know how hard it is to act."

The Real Olympic Experts Pick Our Brightest Stars

By Larry Bortstein Contributing Editor

ix years and more than $1 billion in the making, the Games of the 21st Olympiad take center stage in Montreal, Canada, July 17 to August 1. To assess the chances of American athletes in various Olympic events, FAMILY WEEKLY consulted several leading experts, including three former gold medalists.

(Dates in parentheses below are the dates when the particular sport will be contested in Montreal.)

BILL TOOMEY ON TRACK AND FIELD (July 23-31)

Bill Toomey, now a TV commentator, won a gold medal at Mexico City in the 1968 Olympic decathlon.

Frankly, I'm not as confident as many other people are about our chances in Montreal. I don't think there are any sure winners. But I do like Steve Williams in the 100-meter dash. He's run 9.9 seconds, world record time, more than anyone else. He might win three gold medals, two in the individual sprints and one in a relay. But Steve could have problems in the 200 meters in which Don Quarrie of Jamaica has been doing very well all season. We have great depth in the 400 and should win it, and Rick Wohlhuter is the world's best 800-meter man. We'll have trouble in the distance races and in the steeplechase and both hurdle events. In the marathon, Frank Shorter, who surprised everyone when he won in 1972, could win again.

In the field events, we're especiallystrong in the shot-put and discus. Terry Albritton has been coming on strong in the shot-put. In the discus, we have John Powell and Mac Wilkins, both of whom have held the world record. In the javelin, Bill Schmidt could win.

I like Earl Bell in the pole vault, but it's far from a sure thing. Dwight Stones, the world record holder in the high jump, has the reputation of being flaky, but he's a much more sincere guy than people think. He's been building toward Montreal, and you have to like his chances. He's talking about going 7-7 or 7-8.

This could be a pretty good year for our women in track and field. Francie Larrieu Lutz has a chance for a medal the women's 1500 meters. Kethy Schmidt is close to the world record in the javelin and could be the first American woman ever to win that event. Joni Huntley could be our first gold medal winner in the women's high jump since 1956. Jane Frederick has medal potential in the pentathlon.

I've saved my favorite event, the decathlon, for last. Bruce Jenner has to be the favorite. He set a world record of 8,524 points last summer in a meet against Russia and Poland. This is his big chance, something for which he's been training for three years, eight hours daily.

DONNA DE VARONA ON SWIMMING AND DIVING (July 18-28)

in 1964 at Tokyo, Donna won gold medals in the 400-meter individual medley and the 400-meter freestyle relay. She is now a TV commentator.

The East German girls, who have come on remarkably the past few years, are ahead of our girls for the most part. But I look for our girls to win two or three gold medals. Freestyler Shirley Bahashaff is our best girl swimmer. Her only problem might come if she tries to swim too many events. Kathy Heddy is our great hope in the 200-meter and 400-meter individual medley races. Wendy Boglioli, who at 21 is one of our older competitors, is a good bet in the butterfly. In diving, Janet Ely has an excellent chance to win the gold.

Men's swimming is where our swimmers should really do well. I think we can win nine gold medals in the 13 events on the program. Tim Shaw is a definite gold medal threat in all the free-style events. One of the great races of the entire Olympics could be Shaw versus Steve Holland of Australia in the 1500-meter freestyle, but Tim is better at the shorter distances.

John Naber is probably the best backstroker in the world. In the individual medley events, Steve Furniss is a good bet; and his brother Bruce Furniss is also a gold medal possibility. Greg Jagenberg in the 200-meter butterfly and John Hencken in the 100-meter and 200-meter breaststroke are great.

DEAN SMITH ON BASKETBALL (July 18-27)

Dean Smith, from The University of North Carolina, is head coach of the U.S. Olympic basketball team.

I was very gratified to see more quality players come out for the Olympic team this year than we've had the past couple of Olympics. We've never been in the position before of having another country (Russia) defending the gold medal. There's no question that the public is attaching more significance to the basteball competition in the Olympics this year.

Most of the All-American stars came out for the team this year, including Indiana's 6-7 forward Scott May. Still, it remains to be seen how well we can do against teams in which the men have been playing together for several years.

Also, for the first time ever in the Olympics, women's basketball will be on the program this year. I'd say we have a good chance to win a medal with players such as Lusia Harris from Delta State, Ann Meyers of UCLA, and Mancy Liebermen of Queens College in New York.

FRANK BARE ON GYMNASTICS (July 18-23)

Frank Bare is executive director of the U.S. Gymnestics Federation.

Our strength is in our women's team.
Only one other country has as much depth as we have, and that's Russia. We have outstanding people like Kathy Howard, Kim Chace, and Debbie Wilcox, the only woman who does a forward somersault on the beam—a move more difficult than the backflip done by Olga Korbut.

Our women finished fourth at Munich four years ago. This time, if the judging is fair, our women could very well win their first medal in the team competition.

TOM JOHNSON ON BOXING (July 18-31)

Tom Johnson is an executive vice chairman of the National AAU Boxing Committee and assistant coach of the 1976 U.S. fearn.

Our boys have a good chance to win medals in several divisions at Montreal. Our best man overall may be Clinton Jackson, our welterweight. He won the Pan-American Games championship late summer, and he's won three straight Golden Gloves titles and two straight AAU titles. He's outstanding.

Our other top men seem to be "Sugar Ray" Leonard, light welterweight; Aaron Pryor, lightweight; Davey Armstrong, featherweight; Bernard Taylor, bantamweight; and Richard Rozelle, flyweight. Mike Dokes, our top heavyweight, has what it takes to win a gold medal. We won only one gold medal at Munich; we'll do better this time.

RUDY SABLO ON WEIGHTLIFTING (July 18-27)

Mark Cameron, our heavyweight, is our best bet for a medal. He's the U.S. national champion and could come home with a bronze medal for third place. You virtually have to concede the gold medal to Valentin Christov of Bulgaria.

Our two other best weightlifters are Lee James, the middle-heavyweight, and Bruce Wilhelm, our super-heavyweight Wilhelm is talented, but, like most of our men, he's inexperienced in international competition. Besides, he has to go up against defending champ Vasily Alekseyev of the Soviet Union. I don't see how anyone can beat him.

WAYNE WELLS ON WRESTLING (July 18-29)

Wayne Wells was the gold medal winner in welterweight freestyle wrestling at the 1972 Olympics.

Other countries stay far ahead of us in international wrestling because they're always competing in topflight meets around the world. The U.S. had a great victory when Lloyd Keaser, a licutenant in the Marine Corps, won in the 149½-pound class at the 1973 World Championships in Teheran, Iran. Keaser still is our best bet for a medal at Montreal. Of our other wrestlers, Ben and John Peterson, brothers and both heavy-neights, have been consistent.

ment building, in my own bedroom—and here was this man pulling me out of bed by my hair and throwing me on the floor! I told him he could have everything that was in the apartment. Actually, all that was of value was on the night table. But he wasn't satisfied. He wanted the necklace I'd worn on the David Frost show the night before. I told him it had been borrowed from a jeweler and that I didn't have it. He threatened me and told me something terrible was going to happen. Before I could say anything, he hit my secretary with his gun, like in films. Then he left.

FW: Was he ever caught?

SOPHIA: Never.

FW: Have these incidents changed your outlook on life?

SOPHIA: Of course they have. My jewelry, for example—it wasn't given to me; I'd earned it all myself. Each time I did a film. I bought something for myself to remind me of it. It was like going through my career, and when the jewels were gone, a part of my life was gone with them. But maybe now I've learned to be more secure in myself. So in a way, like every adversity, this one has some benefit.

FW: Did you move to France because you felt safer in Paris?

SOPHIA: No, I went there because of the children's education. Some time ago, I did a film in France and put the children in nursery school. They liked it very much, so I wanted to keep them there.

FW: You and Carlo, who is 21 years older than you, have been together for about a quarter of a century and have been married for about 10 years. Is the marriage still working? Or are the rumors that you might split up true?

SOPHIA: We are as happy as we ever were, and our marriage is as fresh as when we met. We are separated a good deal of the time, but Carlo calls me as much as three times a day, and when he's anywhere nearby, like in Rome, he comes home for long weekends. Life apart from each other means nothing.

FW: How old are the children now?

SOPHIA: Carlo Jr. (Cipi) is 7, and Eduardo (Eli) is 4.

FW: You were in your thirties when you had your first child. Did this worry you? SOPHIA: Yes, it did. Becoming 30 was a real crisis for me when we didn't have any children because I wanted them so much. I thought I was a failure as a wife.

FW: How far did you go in school?

SOPHIA: I quit when I was 14. I needed two more years to become a teacher. At 16, I could have taught certain classes at that time.

FW: Is it true that Carlo will never get involved in a project unless you have read the script and like it?

SOPHIA: As far as what I am doing in films is concerned, we both read the scripts and jointly decide what I should and shouldn't do. As far as my husband's other projects are concerned, he only gives methe script when he is in doubt about something.

FW: Your parents were not married when you were born, and illegitimacy was frowned on much more than it is today. How did this affect your childhood?

SOPHIA: It was very disturbing when I was 7 and started having friends. I was "different." Children can be very cruel about these things. I cried a great deal. But later, when I was in my early teens, I knew what I wanted out of life, and I didn't think of it any more.

FW: When you and Carlo were living together before you were married, because Carlo's Mexican divorce was not accepted, you were called a sinner by the Vatican. How did you feel about that?

SOPHIA: I understood why. What we did was against religious laws. But nothing meant more to me than being in love and being with the man I loved. That held true 15 years ago, and it still holds true today. FW: What do you want out of life now? SOPHIA: For everything to go on as it is, for nothing to ever, ever change. Maybe I am a romantic, but life to me is a fairy tale. I just wish it to go on as it is. For ever and ever. And I hope my children will always be as close to me as we are now.

FW: Do you spoil your children?

SOPHIA: No. I am very fair with them. But I could never slap them. I don't believe slapping a child makes him understand anything. I think you slap because you are nervous. I know that if I am unkind to my children, I regret it terribly.

FW: Were you raised in the same manner? SOPHIA: Oh, no. But that was a different time, a different atmosphere, a different set of problems. There was always the need to survive, to eat. Under the circumstances, there were more important problems to solve than kids.

FW: I notice that you now wear less makeup than you used to. Why?

SOPHIA: Maybe I were more makeup because I was insecure. Now I don't need it any more than I need the jewels which once meant so much to me.

FW: How do you feel about Women's Lib? SOPHIA: I am not against it, but I don't believe in being excessive about it, either. I've always been liberated. I've always believed in equal rights. I always did what I wanted to do. And as far as marriage goes, I think a woman can take over without letting her busband know. She can act like a slave and be the boss, as long as she knows how to play the game.

FW: In "The Cassandra Crossing" you work with Ava Gardner. Is she difficult to get along with?

SOPHIA: Oh, no. I never met Ava before, but I like her. As an actress. Eve admired her for a long, long time. When I dreamed of getting ahead, I always wanted to be like her.

FW: But how do you compare your lives now? Would you trade?

SOPHIA: I don't know about Ava's lifemaybe she has a wonderful one, maybe she does not. But I do know that I would not want to trade with anyone! Observations

Sharing the Bicontennial. There's a special excitement running through our country, and we're feeling the tingle. Though Mobil products didn't light Paul Revers lantern or lubricate colonial gun carriages, Mobil has been part of America's tradition for 110 of our nation's 200 years. Industrial sinew in the growth of a nation.

Hiram Bond Everest, a businessman who had tailed twice before, started us out in 1866 in Rochester, N.Y., by going into partnership with carpenter-Matthew Ewing in an effort to distill more kerosine out of crude oil through a new vacuum process, it didn't work, instead, it left an ofly residue which proved much superior to the lubricants then available. Everest hit the road with a handcart loaded with oyster cans filled with Vacuum Harness Oil, and we were off and running.

Oil for the lampe of China—that was one of our early contributions to the development of U.S. foreign trade. In the Yankee trading tradition, we sold kerosine lamps cheaply, or even gave them away, to create a Chinese market for tips of kerosine shipped in four-masted clipper ships. We lubricated Armerica's first gasoline engines in the 1890s and the car Barney Oldfield drove to a world speed record of 131.72 mph in 1910. We lubricated the Wright Brothers' first airplane and Lindbergh's Spirit of St. Louis. We helped muster the petroleum for two world wars, losino in World War II 437 marine employees and 32 tahkers.

Serving America, in the decades after World War II, we rebuilt from the wreckage abroad and invested heavily in the U.S., finding more oil and gas, erecting new refineries and chemical plants, and streamlining our ability to anticipate—and meet—our customers' needs for fuels and lubricants. We developed new crude oil sources in the Gulf of Mexico, in Alaska, and in a score of countries, including several in the oil-rich Middle East. Our worldwide network of refineries, pipelines, and tankers kept our customers supplied during the Middle East conflicts of 1956, 1967, and 1973. Today Mobil's diversified energy capabilities add significantly to America's economic and military strength. As the nation enters its third century, we're carrying on the Everest-Ewing tradition. And looking forward to serving a growing America for at least another couple of hundred years.

People Quiz By John E. Gibson

Should You Open the Doors to Your Secret Self?

that her mystique may suffer if she's too well understoodtherefore she is more secretive than a man. (See No. 5)

TRUE OR FALSE?

- 1. How much you reveal about yourself to other people depends on how much they reveal about themselves.
- 2. The more you reveal of yourself, the more people like you.
- 3. How much you disclose about yourself to others calls for exercising judgment and discretion.
- 4. How much you reveal about yourself to another person provides a clue to how well-adjusted you are.
- 5. A woman feels that her mystique may suffer if she's too well understood -therefore she is more secretive than
- 6. How much office workers reveal about themselves, and to whom, depends on the person's status.

ANSWERS

- 1. True. The response in most cases is almost automatic. The more you reveal yourself to another, the more he is likely to reveal himself to you-and vice versa. This has been demonstrated in studies at the Oregon College of Education where, using confederates, investigators exposed undergraduates to experiments in self-disclosure. In every case, the more confederates disclosed about themselves, the more students responded in kind.
- 2. True-with reservations. Generally speaking, the more open people are about their thoughts, feelings and ideas, the more we like them-unless, of course, their disclosures are so at variance with our own beliefs that they rub us the wrong way. In studies conducted by a team of investigators at Georgia State College, it was found that "more intimate initial disclosures were made to those who were initially better liked. In turn, final liking was higher for those who made intimate disclosures."
- 3. True. A University of Minnesota study cites findings emphasizing the importance of discretion and the need for maintaining a private area of the self-which, it's suggested, "may have a significance in giving a person a sense of individuality." And psychologist Paul C. Cozby notes that "while increasing intimacy may represent increasing reward, various costs become evident at high intimacy levels, the most obvious being anxiety over revealing information one would rather keep private." Further research suggests that 'some marital difficulties are the result of too much self-disclosure" (leaving no room for surprises). Thus, the behavior specialist points out, discretion may be important in preventing boredom in personal relationships.

- 4. True. Studies show that people who refuse to reveal themselves to others tend to be less well-adjusted. On the other hand, it has been found that people who reveal themselves indiscriminately are likely to have neurotic tendencies. People with good personality adjustment tend to communicate their inner feelings to others-but they are selective in their self-disclosure.
- 5. False. Consensus of leading psychological studies indicates that when it comes to self-disclosure, men are much less open than women. In particular, men are more inclined to emphasize their positive characteristics and conceal their negative qualities. And research at Brigham Young University showed that "females tended to disclose more than males about everything except money."
- 6. True. In a University of California study, behavior scientists interviewed office workers at four organization levels to determine attitudes and practices. Findings: "Workers reported the greatest willingness to make selfdisclosures to fellow workers." But it was also found that workers were more willing to reveal themselves to immediate superiors than to immediate subordinates. The investigators concluded that: confiding in one's boss reflects an attempt to establish intimacy with him.

People Quiz By John E. Gibson

Should You Open the Doors to Your Secret Self?

that her mystique may suffer if she's too well understoodtherefore she is more secretive than a man. (See No. 5)

TRUE OR FALSE?

- 1. How much you reveal about yourself to other people depends on how much they reveal about themselves.
- 2. The more you reveal of yourself, the more people like you.
- 3. How much you disclose about yourself to others calls for exercising judgment and discretion.
- 4. How much you reveal about yourself to another person provides a clue to how well-adjusted you are.
- 5. A woman feels that her mystique may suffer if she's too well understood -therefore she is more secretive than a man
- 6. How much office workers reveal about themselves, and to whom, depends on the person's status.

ANSWERS

- 1. True. The response in most cases is almost automatic. The more you reveal yourself to another, the more he is likely to reveal himself to you-and vice versa. This has been demonstrated in studies at the Oregon College of Education where, using confederates, investigators exposed undergraduates to experiments in self-disclosure. In every case, the more confederates disclosed about themselves, the more students responded in kind.
- 2. True-with reservations. Generally speaking, the more open people are about their thoughts, feelings and ideas, the more we like them-unless, of course, their disclosures are so at variance with our own beliefs that they rub us the wrong way. In studies conducted by a team of investigators at Georgia State College, it was found that "more intimate initial disclosures were made to those who were initially better liked. In turn, final liking was higher for those who made intimate disclosures."
- 3. True. A University of Minnesota study cites findings emphasizing the importance of discretion and the need for maintaining a private area of the self-which, it's suggested, "may have a significance in giving a person a sense of individuality." And psychologist Paul C. Cozby notes that "while increasing intimacy may represent increasing reward, various costs become evident at high intimacy levels, the most obvious being anxiety over revealing information one would rather keep private." Further research suggests that "some marital difficulties are the result of too much self-disclosure" (leaving no room for surprises). Thus, the behavior specialist points out, discretion may be important in preventing boredom in personal relationships.

- 4. True. Studies show that people who refuse to reveal themselves to others tend to be less well-adjusted. On the other hand, it has been found that people who reveal themselves indiscriminately are likely to have neurotic tendencies. People with good personality adjustment tend to communicate their inner feelings to others-but they are selective in their self-disclosure.
- 5. False. Consensus of leading psychological studies indicates that when it comes to self-disclosure, men are much less open than women. In particular, men are more inclined to emphasize their positive characteristics and conceal their negative qualities. And research at Brigham Young University showed that "females tended to disclose more than males about everything except money."
- 6. True. In a University of California study, behavior scientists interviewed office workers at four organization levels to determine attitudes and practices. Findings: "Workers reported the greatest willingness to make selfdisclosures to fellow workers." But it was also found that workers were more willing to reveal themselves to immediate superiors than to immediate subordinates. The investigators concluded that; confiding in one's boss reflects an attempt to establish intimacy with him.

Now! With the simple method of Foot Reflexology!

'You Can Get Almost Immediate Relief from Aches and Pains All Over the Body!'

"I have brought relief to countless suffering people with this method — and have watched their joy of regained health and vitality — when all hope had seemingly been lost!"

"Let me show you how it can bring about the normal function of a specific location or organ..."

Says MILDRED CARTER, Professional Reflexologist

Dear Friend:

My name is Mildred Carter. I am not a doctor, but for over 14 years, I have been helping people receive remarkable relief from seemingly hopeless aches and pains all over the body, with a method—which you can use, too—called Foot Reflexology.

Foot Reflexology is a method for healing the whole body. If you've ever suffered from foot trouble, you know that it's the feet that make the whole body ache. By rubbing and pressing gently on certain areas of your feet, I can show you how you may get almost immediate relief IN OTHER PARTS OF THE BODY!

Why? Because the feet contain Reflexes, which lead like telephone lines to all parts of the body. By pressing them, you help restore normal circulation and health to congested areas. No one can guarantee a cure, nor is it a medical substitute, but:

- I have seen it relieve crippled hands and feet, caused by painful arthritis, straighten whole bodies and bring them back to normal!
  - It can stop the pain of hemorrhoids almost immediately!
  - Most headaches vanish immediately with this method!
  - I have seen it relieve liver and gall bladder trouble!
  - I have seen it clear up stuffed sinuses almost immediately! I have seen it relieve back troubles, in a matter of seconds!
  - I have seen it bring fast relief to stomach troubles!
  - I have brought lasting relief to sufferers of varicose veins with this method. This is also true with cramps or pains in the legs!
  - I have seen it relieve bladder trouble quickly, with great relief after the very first treatment—all sensation of burning or itching seems to
  - This simple method can bring women blessed relief from many dis-orders which may have been troubling them for years!
  - I have brought relief to men, in every case of prostate trouble I have ever treated with this method!

...And still that's just the beginning! You'll find the full details of this amazing method of healing in a new book which I have written, called HELPING YOURSELF WITH FOOT REFLEXOLOGY. I'll tell you how to get it in just a moment, but first I want to tell you more about it!

Many Healings Reported!

Foot Reflexology is a safe, natural, and inexpensive way to help restore healthful circulation to every area of your body.

Did you ever notice how quickly water freshens when good water is poured into muddy water? Foot Reflexology does the same for circulation in your body. Blood flow slows over the years. Naturally, glands and organs become sluggish. Stimulating a new flow of blood to these "tired" places brings new life, clears glands and organs of years of accumulated waste.

Healings and relief from discomforts of all sorts are reported, by the dozen, in the pages of my book. All were obtained with the help of Foot Reflexology.

Here's What I Say In This Book:

The littlest dog tamer in England is Emma Jane, the proud owner of a 208-pound Great Dane named Monty who stands 3½-feet tall. Monty's food intake is comparable to that of a family of four. But according to Emma's parents, Monty is an excellent guard dog who watches over his young mistress with a dutiful eye. He happily allows Emma to ride on his back and treats her gently. What's Emma's ambition? She wants to grow up to be as big as her dog.

modern times — Sir Laurence Olivier, John Gielgud, Ralph Richardson—but I learned more from watching Bruce Lee than all of the others combined. One day, rather by accident, I walked into one of his movies. There was all this violence going on on the screen, but amidst that a human being emerged. I sat there spellbound for the rest of the movie, not because of the violence but because I was entranced by Bruce Lee's sheer power and concentration. He had such control over all his energies and movements that even his facial expressions didn't change. Watching that remarkable control and self-discipline led me to believe that we can do anything if we really try. Once we've witnessed a hero or heroine in our own life, anything is within our grasp." Ms. Miles, who believes life is sustained by learning something new every day, advocates that everyone keep a diary to record what he learns every day. No doubt the time she "met" the late Bruce Lee marks a special place in her book. She stars with Kris Kristofferson in "The Sailor Who Fell From Grace With the Sea."

Bob Miles, who's a schoolteacher, wanted to buy an amphibious car to get him to work across the river each day, but he says, "On a teacher's salary, I couldn't afford one. So I nut my imagination to work. I took one. So I put my imagination to work. I took my 1908 postman's bicycle, fitted it with two eight-foot plastic floats and a mini-car fan to act as a propeller. I can only go five knots an hour on my waterbike, but it saves me miles of travel since going across the river is a great shortcut for me." It took Bob 50 hours of work to perfect his invention, and then he had it patented. Presently, he's trying to design "clip-on" floats so that anyone with a regular bicycle will be able to cycle down his own river some day. Bob's river is the Hamble in Hampshire, England.

Daring Rescue Operation Boosts Nation's Morale

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) - Israel gives a hero's funeral today to American-born Lt. Col. Yonatan Netanyahu, the only Israeli commando killed in the rescue of more than 100 hostages held by Palestinian terrorists at Uganda's Entebbe Airport. Two of the three Israeli civilians killed in the gun battle Saturday night were buried Monday with military honors. Speaking at one of the funerals, Israel's chief military chaplain, Brig. Mordechai Piron. said the 2,400-mile, three-plane commando raid "was a magnificent, courageous operation, but it is the fate of this nation that every joy and delight be mixed with pain and mourning.'

Threats of retaliation from Palestinians in Lebanon and from Uganda's President Idi Amin did nothing to diminish the pride and rejoicing of the Israelis in their armed forces' most notable exploit since the defeat of the Arabs in the 1967 Six-Day War.

Border patrols were being especially vigilant, and Palestinian reprisal attacks on Israeli diplomatic and business establishments in foreign countries seemed likely. But with the Palestinians in Lebanon fighting for their existence in a civil war with Christian Lebanese and Syrian forces, no largescale raids across the border were expected. Amin's threats aroused concern only because one os the Israeli passengers on the hijacked Air France airliner, 75-year-old Dora Bloch, was in a Kampala hospital when the commandos landed, and they could not bring her back. The Israeli government appealed to the International Red Cross and an unidentified third country to secure her release.

The Ugandan president, who reported that the Israeli commandos killed 20 of his troops and wounded 32, sent protests against the attack to the United Nations, the Organization of African Unity, the Arab League and other Third World countries. He alsbsclared today and Wednesday days of mourning

California Terrorists Say Bombs Are Ticking Away

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) -The terrorist New World Liberation Front says it has planted three time bombs to go off by Saturday at two Pacific Gas & Electric Co. sites in the San Francisco Bay area.

A communique, revealed Monday and signed by the NWLF Central Command, warned PG&E employes to stay away from work until after July 10 so they won't be hurt.

A spokesman for the utility said employes should report to work and that operations would continue as usual.

At a hastily organized news conference, a member of an above-ground support group for the NWLF read the communique warning of the bombs and threatening further attacks.

Ande Lougher, of NWLF People's Information Relay-1, quoted the communique as saying three "calendar clocks are placed at two PG&E sites in the Bay Area.

I don't want to seem unpatriotic because of Operation Sail and I don't want him to go to jail. All I want is to see the fruits of justice are given to my 12-year-old child.

She said she had lost track of her former husband until someone sent her a recent newspaper clipping identifying Thiry as the skipper of the Unicorn and reporting the ship's participation in Operation Sail. Thiry declined to comment on the case, but his lawyer, Tamar Benamy, said there had been no attempt by the mother in nine years to collect any of the money. Thiry lives in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. His former wife resides in Bergenfield, N.J.

The Unicorn is a training ship for rehabilitating juvenile delinquents. Twelve members of its crew are teen-aged boys who have been in trouble with police. Built in 1948 as a cargo-carrying schooner, the Unicorn was rerigged by Thiry as a 19th Century brig. It is now leased by a group of six nonprofit rehabilitation schools called the Associated Marine Institute of Florida.

Milliken Axes Super Consumerism

Last week Governor Milliken vetoed a lengthy, complex store pricing bill adopted by the legislature whose only saving grace was that it would not take effect until 18 months after going on the books.

The measure had two major objectives in view.

To prevent "bait and switch" sales methods, a retailer advertising bargain price items would have to state the quantity available and if the sale involved a mixture of products, how many of each would be available.

To forestall a computerized checkout method which several food chains are planning to install, the store would still have to mark the price on every can, bottle and container. The computer method would read a coding on the container and feed the message into the cash

Both objectives are laudable on their face, except the procedure for one is overly burdensome and the motive for the other is less than its stated pur-

"Bait and switch" is a stunt as old as retailing itself.

A merchant advertises a string, of bargains or some times dramatizes the giveaway aspect of one major item to lure customers into the store.

Once they have arrived, it becomes the function of the sales clerk to explain the store is already sold out but that "here is something even better, just what you should have. The pitch doesn't always work, but this does not faze the gyp operator who fully realizes the wisdom in Phineas T. Barnum's succinct observation there is a sucker born every minute. By firing a shotgun at all retailers instead of staying with the rifle needed to shoot down the con artist, the bill would impose a heavy cost upon the store operator in special inventorying of stock which should be cleared from the shelves.

The bill's price marking feature exempted small items but otherwise would require the identifying dollar and cent tag on all others. For example, a hardware dealer would not have to mark nails, nuts and bolts, but would have to tag a screwdriver, a pair of pliers, a hammer, a so on. A groceryman would not have to tag a candy bar or a package of gum, but would have to label a can of peas, a bottle of catsup, a box of cereal, a package of bacon, and so forth.

Though the hardware dealer does not normally reprice his merchandise at frequent intervals, the grocerymeat market manager is continually changing signals, up or down, as the wholesale index rises or falls. If he fails to anticipte an upswing from his supply level, he can soon be selling at below cost. Conversely if he does not mark down as the supply trend indicates, he will be overpricing himself out of customers.

The computer method will reduce the labor cost in that relabelling

The Retail Clerks Union fought vigorously to retain the hand tagging system because the computer will replace stock boys and other personnel to some extent.

In vetoing the bill, Milliken declared the legislature should concentrate on a plan more feasible to administer and less punishing upon the merchant fra-

The irate response from the labor people and the consumerists who automatically peg all retailers as crooks need not be restated here.

The heat of their reaction is such as to indicate Milliken understands, much as they do not care to, it is not necessary to perform open heart surgery to set a broken wrist.

Student Loan Defaults Are National Scandal

One of the frequently unmentioned problems with crimen white collar crime included, is the cost that is borne by everyone. It is not only the direct victim who loses. Everyone does every time a crime is committed.

If enough citizens realized this, public apathy might well give way to indignance and action to help bring down the crime rate. One type of crime involving federal funds, which in some quarters isn't even looked upon as a crime, is the governmentinsured student loan default.

Overlooking the genuine default, the small percentage of cases in every loan program which happens through no fault of the debtor, the student loan program has produced a terrible repayment record, one which is directly affecting the ability of the genuinely needy student to borrow the funds he needs.

Under this program, the federal government pays off schools and lending institutions for defaulted loans and then tries to collect from the students. In fiscal 1975 alone, the Office of Education estimates it will pay off $159 million in defaulted loans. The default rate was almost 17 per cent in 1975. That is a sorry record demanding a public outcry, especially by the student who needs a loan and may not

Concentrating on 162 of the nation's largest employers, the Endicott survey found businesses hiring significantly more college graduates so far this year than they had anticipated last fall. That is a reverse of the situation in 1975, when hirings of spring graduates fell below the previous fall's expecta-

Endicott said his findings indicate hiring practices of the top corporations now are back to 1974 levels. Looking to the future, 87 per cent of the corporations polled said they expected to have more college graduates on their work forces five years from now.

One sour note was received when the prospective employers were asked about liberal arts graduates. Only 11 per cent said they expected to hire more liberal arts graduates in the next five years. Many of the employers were critical of the colleges, contending they still were not offering enough

Such A Quick 'Comeback'

In the May-June issue of Michigan Natural Resources an article entitled "The Perch Are Back," by Norris McDowell ends with these words: " studies have shown that almost unlimited SPORT (italics his) fishing will not damage basic supplies of the fish. And most important of all is the fact that millions of perch are out there, just waiting to be caught. Some are waiting for you." This triggered several reactions on my

1. The perch that are waiting for me will wait a long time because I am a non-angling consumer who can't get my share. With most of the local commercial fishermen out of business the price of fresh perch is prohibitive.

2. McDowell's statement that there are millions of perch out there confirms another report I heard recently. An employee of the Cook Nuclear plant told me that part of his job was keeping records of the effect of the plant on the fish and their food supply. His records show that there are more perch in the lake than there have been for many years. If this is true, why should there not be quotas for BOTH sport and commercial fishermen so that everybody could have a

3. Part of the answer to that question, I know, lies in the controversy between the DNR and the commercial fishermen over the use of gill nets. But this brings up another question to which I have never received an answer. As I understand it. the DNR claims that the gill nets kill the fish. But gill nets are used to catch fish which are taken for research (both by marine biologists and the nuclear plant employees) and then returned to the water alive. How does it happen that gill nets are acceptable for research and prohibited for the commercial fishermen? If there really are millions of perch in the lake then there should be a way to set up a quota system for both sport and commercial fishermen so that the latter could continue to earn a living and the consumer who doesn't fish could have a fair share of the lake's resources.

READER FEELS U.S. STRENGTH IN GOD

In 1776 the second Continental Congress signed a very important document known as the Declaration of Independence. Of far greater significance for the Christian, however, is his Declaration of Dependence resolve to lean on God completely in every circumstance.

All over America the last few weeks have been filled with days of anxiety and excitement as the nation prepared to commemorate its 200th anniversary. Speeches, parades, musical concerts have been telling the story of the bicentennial of the nation. As Christians we rejoice that the bicentennial fell on Sunday. It is a firm reminder that whatever America has accomplished is due to God.

In the history of U.S. when liberty could have been extinguished and her economic structure almost had collapsed, God intervened. Man fails, but

Now it should be cautioned that these reports are incomplete and in such jumbled form that it is impossible at this date to be certain the backing that each residential candidate is receiving and from whom This is true of all the major presidential aspirants. Another problem: There are at present 999 political donor committees and 200 others which operated for a period collected money, disposed of their funds and then filed to be delisted. Now 1,199 funds, submit, scattering money here and there, sometimes to opposing candidates, can muddy the waters to a fare thee well.

But on the surface, Reagan's $100-and-up donors seem to cut across as wide a spectrum of the electorate as Jimmy Carter's.

They Knew How To Toss A Party

With the Bicentennial year with us, the ghosts of the past are certainly present. What are they saying to us? In one version of their message, we are too self-indulgent in our personal habits and much too cruel to other nations around the world. In this version, our 18th-century forebears look like faces on Mount Rushmore and images on our currency. We cannot possibly measure up to these stern Catos.

God, if only we could be that virtuous, perhaps we would be loved from the Zambesi to the Lest our forefathers be irretrievably merged with Mount Rushmore. I would like to pass along a delightful tidbit that has floated into my professional 18th-century researches. Those 18th-century gentlemen were not only statesmen and Constitution makers - they also knew how to throw a party.

The item in question tells its own story. It is a bill rendered for a celebration thrown on December 17, 1793, by the Governor of New York State for President George Washington and his guest the French Ambassador. The bare statement of the account tells the whole story of the party.

"The explanation for my behavior is quite sim-

As the first item indicates, it was a sizable affair: 120 dinners, charged at 48 pounds. Thus, a large number of dignitaries assembled for this pre-Christmas bash. You can begin to visualize them in their coats, wigs, and breeches. Of course, for a state occasion like this, a good deal of entertainment was laid on. We read down the bill. There were eight dinners for the musicians, and ten dinners for the servants.

After the 120 dinners, we find that there were 135 bottles of Madeira wine, total cost 54

Okay, so everyone had a bottle plus. But also, there are 36 bottles of port wine, for 10 pounds 16 shillings. Oh ho ho, things seem to be getting livelier.

Then we find 60 bottles of English beer, for 9 pounds Evidently the diners there have not rejected everything English. But there is much more to come. We read down the bill Next comes 30 bowls of punch. for 9 pounds. That large bill in dicates that the punch was not

Then there come a few tell tale items on the bill that indicate what a political bash in 1793 actually was like. Sixty wine glasses were broken, at a cost of 4 pounds ten shillings Well, wine glasses are one thing, but how about those decanters, used for the punch' Well, eight of those went too, a a cost of 3 pounds.

One immensely humorous item ends the list. There is a charge of 1 pound 12 shillings for coffee for "8 gentlemen." Apparently eight gentlemen made it through the evening in sufficient shape to drink a fina cup of coffee.

Obviously, on the next day those 18th-century American were badly hung over. They were in fact well into the Christmas season. But they had just won a war against the world's premier power and they had a coastal navy that none would dare trifle with. I see them coming now, tough and hilarious 18th-century ghosts not paragons, and certainly no

Stevensville Event A 'Success', But It May Be Last

By ALICE KOCH Stevensville Correspondent

The annual Liberty Days celebration in Stevensville ended Sunday for what could be the final time. Sponsors of the two-day festival announced after this year's edition ended that they would no longer stage the celebration because of the lack of manpower. They left the door open for others to take up the program, however.

The announcement came although festival sponsors termed this year's program a "big success." They estimated 3,500 people attended the annual parade Sunday and about 700 attended an adult street dance Saturday night

Mrs. John (Vickie) Florin, chairman of the festival for the Liberty Days committee, said in the announcement "It was hoped by those who worked on this event the past two years that it would become an annual Fourth of July celebration. It is impossible to continue this plan, however, because of a small percentage of the people were willing to give of their time."

The committee is made up of representatives from five main Lakeshore area organizations which took over sponsorship of what had been an annual kiddies parade. The change occurred when the Jaycees dropped sponsorship of the kiddies event.

The Liberty Days committee in the announcement said the committee made the following decision regarding the future of the program:

Liberty Days officers, will qualify for the funds. "The committee has also agreed that if by 1981, funds remain untouched, the funds will be donated to the Lincoln township parks and recreation commission, solely for future development of the township community center park."

Despite the dim outlook for future Liberty Days celebrations, the Sunday parade - The Spirit of '76 - was bright and festive as children and adults marched under sunny skies down Stevensville's St. Joseph "Americans-All" was the theme for the 70-unit parade. Approximately 100 children participated in the 40-unit children's section.

'Your Problems' By Ann Landers

Schools' Goal: Mediocrity

Dear Ann Landers: I read with interest your comment, "The sooner we get back to basics in our schools the better." As one who has worked in education for 30 years I share your concern.

The problem lies in the philosophy of education today. Instead of stressing academic achievement, the idea is to make the student "feel good about himself." A child is allowed to progress at his own rate, which means he can move ahead if he feels like it. Discipline is at the lowest ebb in the history of the public school system. Teachers must spend valuable teaching time maintaining order in the classroom.

Memorizing facts is considered old hat. Competition and rivalry are said to be damaging because they "create pressure." Grades are "bad" because they can be hard on a child's ego. Our schools are geared to the non-achiever. The result is mediocrity.

In our day we learned how to compete and cope with the world. Now students are encouraged to "do their own thing." If they don't learn anything the world is supposed to cope with THEM.

Teachers are no longer the focal point for education. They have been replaced by a fanapreoccupation with programs. So, Ann, what can be done to get schools back to teaching children? May I suggest that parents attend local school board meetings and demand that their tax dollars be spent to educate their children? Thanks for the forum. — From The Athens Of The Midwest -Madison, Wis.

Hair dyes are chemicals and can be irritating to a highly allergic or sensitive skin. # Dynamite Cache Found; Police Grab 2 Suspects

TOPSFIELD, Mass. (AP) -A large cache of dynamite buried in a wooded area in Boxford may be linked to the recent series of bombings in Maine. Massachusetts and New Hampshire, according to state police.

Police discovered 611 sticks of dynamite stored in three 55gallon metal drums just off a dirt path in the heavily wooded town Monday, according to State Police Col. John R. O'Donovan.

There had been fresh digging at the site, he said.

The discovery was the result of an intensive one-day investigation by state and federal authorities following the arrest of two Maine :nen for interstate transportation of explosives on Joseph Aceto, 23, of Portland was arrested after police found 46 sticks of dynamite, firearms and timing devices in his car. FBI agents had tailed him Saturday night from Portland to Massachusetts, but had lost the trail. State police spotted him hitchhiking Sunday after his car was demolished in an accident. Later Sunday, authorities arrested Everett C. Carlson, 38, for interstate transportation of explosives.

According to the FBI in Portland, evidence seized in raids at the Carlston and Aceto residences included mention of the Fred Hampton Unit of People's Forces, the group which claimed responsibility for the bombing of the Central Maine Power Company in Augusta last spring. In Aceto's apartment, police also found blasting caps, timing devices, and a quantity of dynamite weighing more than 100 pounds.

Investigators were trying to determine whether the confiscated explosives matched any of those used in bombings at the power company in Maine, a post office in New Hampshire, an airplane at Logan Airport in

Ex-Newsboy Gun Victim Again

DETROIT (AP) - A 14-yearold former newsboy, gunned down twice in three months, and another youth are the latest victims in what police say is a wave of teenage gang violence on the city's east side.

Witnesses told police Melvin Martin was struck by one of five shots fired from a passing car as he talked to two friends a few doors from his home shortly after midnight Monday.

The bullet lodged in his spine and doctors say he may never walk again. Martin was shot last March 25, apparently by a member of the Black Killers, the same teenage gang police believe was responsible for shooting him Monday.

Alvia said a car had pulled up alongside the suspected gang member earlier, someone inside said, "We're the BKs," and then the car moved on. The same persons are believed to have been in the car from which the shots were fired later, hitting Martin, police said.

In another incident apparently committed by a different gang, an eastside teenager, Reinard Graves, 18, was shot from a passing car. He was treated at a hospital and released. OAU unanimously condemned the raid and said it would ask the U.N. Security Council to take up the matter.

The Ugandan government radio reported that the 20 dead soldiers and the seven hijackers killed by the Israeli raiders were buried side by side in Kampala, the Ugandan capital, with full military honors Mon-

The terrorists included a German man and woman, believed to have been members of the anarchist Baader-Meinhof Gang. They and two Palestinians carried out the hijacking of the Air France plane on June 27, and they were joined at Entebbe by at least three more heavily armed Palestinians. Reports from some of the hostages indicated there may have been more, but this has not been other Western leaders congraulated the Israeli government on the commando raid, and newspapers in a number of countries published editorials expressing approval or understanding of the tough response to the hijacking. Israel's traditional foes, the Arabs and the Soviets, issued the expected denunciations.

U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim denied an Egyptian report that he had accused the Israelis of "flagrant aggression." A statement from a spokesman said the secretarygeneral was questioned during a visit to Cairo about "legal and iuridical aspects of the Israeli raid" and replied that it "was indeed a violation of the sovereignty of a U.N. member state." But later Monday in Waldheim Frankfurt. "expressed satisfaction that it proved possible to save human

Amin is bound to step up his war of words against Kenya, informed sources say

Uganda and Kenya are partners with Tanzania in the East African Economic Community. Amin's predecessor, President Milton Obote, was respected in Kenya and on friendly terms with Kenyan President Jomo Kenyatta.

When Amin, then army commander, overthrew Obote in a military coup in January 1971, Kenya chose not to interfere and rejected Obote's request for political asylum.

But Amin's abrupt expulsion of 40,000 Asians, his break with Israel, his flirting with the Arabs and the systematic and brutal extermination of his President Ford and many enemies found no favor in Kenya. The adverse publicity the tourist throughout East Africa and in Kenya particularly

Spending Limit Petitions

LANSING, Mich. (AP) - A group seeking to limit state spending from year-to-year says it has collected enough signatures to place a proposed constitutional amendment on the November ballot. A spokesman for Taxpayers United said Monday that 320,000 signatures have been collected, or some 55,000 more than required. The group said it would file the petitions today with the secretary of state. Group officials say the proposal would limit taxation and spending to 8.3 per cent of the yearly personal income of state residents. It would also prohibit Michigan from ordering certain local programs without providing funds to carry them out.

Corpse Mutilation Charges

DETROIT (AP) - Investigators say they don't have a motive in the case of a former assistant medical examiner accused of decapitating 12 corpses and stripping the flesh from 14 dead bodies at the Wayne County Morgue and Wayne State University. The charges of mutilating human bodies have been filed against Dr. Millard Bass, 45, an esteopath who resigned from the morgue and moved to Massachusetts in May while under investigation. Bass has denied the charges. Wayne County Prosecutor William Cahalan said there was no known medical, scientific or commercial reason for the decapitations and the strippings of flesh. Bass was specifically charged with removing the skull of Glenda Reed. 24. # Marcellus' Empty Clinic Emphasizes MD Shortage communities are seeking new doctors. In Michigan, about 125 towns want them. "If I had about 2,000 doctors show up tomorrow morning and if they were the right kind of doctors, I could find jobs for all of them by tomorrow night," contended John A.

MARCELLUS, Mich. (AP) - Folks in this Cass County farming town have dipped into their wallets to provide a $60,000 clinic they hope will bring them a doctor. "The community has shown about as graphically as it can that we want a doctor.... What more could be done, I don't know," says Don Moormann, owner of the weekly Marcellus News. Despite some inquiries, the clinic stands empty. And hopes of finding a new doctor or two for Marcellus may never be realized.

Competition for physicians is keen. Nationally, about 1,600

Doherty, executive vice president for the Michigan Health Council. The Council has placed about 1,500 doctors and nearly 500 dentists in Michigan communities since 1958.

But Doherty estimated that right now nearly 125 Michigan towns seek doctors and nearly 2,000 physicians are needed.

Doherty said he feels sorry for Marcellus since that town will need "some sort of exceptional effort" to attract a new doctor. He said a major problem for Marcellus is its distance from a hospital. "There are not many people in the U.S. who are interested in being a solo doctor and that far from a hospital," Doherty contended. "There's great competition. I would not say that it's an easy road," agreed Ronald R. Cripps, a Farm Bureau employe heading the Marcellus drive to find a doctor.

Cripps said Marcellus is 13 miles from the nearest hospital at Three Rivers. There is another hospital in Paw Paw about 14 miles away and one in Dowagiac, about 18 miles off. "Doctors tend to want a job where they can work eight hours and go home. It's not always possible in a small town," Cripps added. Still, Marcellus fares better than some towns. It still has one doctor despite its population of about 1,100.

But Dr. Uriah Adams, who has practiced only in Marcellus since leaving the University of Michigan Medical School in the 1930s, is well into his 70s.

Adams, who grew up in the country just eight miles from Marcellus, continues to practice although "he has cut down some. He takes an extra day off now," his wife reported. But when asked if the doctor plans to retire, Mrs. Adams replied, "Oh, how can he? They just never get away from this. You don't just drop everything

The clinic in Marcellus was financed through sale of non interest-bearing bonds because, Cripps said, "We can see the day when we'll be without a doctor completely.... This has been a foresight program on our part, knowing that someday we'll be without a doctor." The clinic provides 2,100 square feet for two doctors to share. They would have a common waiting room and X-ray room but two separate treatment rooms and an office each, Cripps said. "We have a marvelous setup, just ready and waiting for a doctor," said David Jones, first vice president of the Lions Club, which sponsored the clinic-building efforts. "If we didn't have clinic, we know that we'd be out of luck. That's why we worked so hard."

Cass County, where Marcellus is located, ranks 76th among Michigan's 83 counties with just one physician for each 2,166 residents. The statewide average is one per 637 persons, according to Health Council figures Keweenaw County in the Upper Peninsula has the state's worst doctor shortage. There isn't a single resident physician for its 2,264 residents.

The other six lowest ranking counties are Arenac, Presque Isle, Montmorency, Eaton. Clinton and Alcona. Only 13 counties in Michigan list no openings for physicians. They are Gratiot, Galdwin, Missaukee, Oscoda, Kalkaska, Grand Traverse, Leelanau, Antrim, Montmorency, Cheboygan, Menominee, Baraga and Keweenaw. One sign that Michigan really is in the midst of a doctor shortage is that the number of physicians in private practice dropped last year for the first time since World War II. Doherty said until then the state had added at least 200 doctors annually. He said the state lost 154 physicians last year with 62 of those from the general practice ranks. Doherty put part of the blame upon high medical insurance rates, the state's new Single Business Tax and new laws requiring 50 hours of graduate medical education for doctors

As recently as 1974, Michigan gained 273 practicing doctors. The most severe shortage is among so-called family doctors, Doherty noted Michigan has just 1,452 such doctors now compared with 2,265 a decade ago. State medical centers and hospitals graduated only 27 doctors specializing in family practice this year.

Brazilians Hail U.S. Birthday

AMERICANA, Brazil (AP) -About 200 Brazilians will gather at a little red brick church near Americana Sunday to celebrate the U.S. Bicentennial. And the Stars and Bars of the Confederacy will be hung prominently and proudly alongside the Stars and Stripes.

The Brazilians are descendants of Southerners who fled to Brazil after their defeat in the Civil War. They are scattered throughout Brazil and have become assimilated into Brazilian life.

But every three months they gather at the little church in the rolling hills 10 miles outside Americana to hold religious services and have a picnic dinner.

"Brazil is our mother country, but the United States is our grandmother country," says Judith McKnight Jones.

In front of the church stands the Confederate Memorial, an obelisk displaying Confederate flags and the names of the families who settled in Americana. Behind the church is a little cemetery in which many of the early immigrants are buried; the Protestant Southerners had to have their own graveyard because in those days the Roman Catholic Church would not admit them to its burial grounds.

The American Descendancy Fraternity, formed by the descendants about 20 years ago to preserve their heritage, had bad luck trying to start a museum on the church grounds.

Jimmy Carter visited here in 1972 while he was governor of Georgia and laid the cornerstone for the museum building. But heavy rains apparently weakened the foundations of the building, and part of it collapsed. The fraternity hasn't decided whether to try to rebuild.

Father-Son Events 'Out'

WASHINGTON (AP) Federal officials have decided that public schools may no longer sponsor father-son or mother-daughter events because they violate new rules against sex discrimination.

That's the word quietly passed to school administrators in Scottsdale, Ariz., last week, more than five months after the officials asked if such activities were still lawful under regulations approved by President Ford last summer.

In a letter cleared through Washington channels, John E.

Palomina of the San Francisco regional Office for Civil Rights wrote to the officials telling them that "functions such as father-son or mother-daughter breakfasts would be subjecting students to separate treatment and would not be permitted."

And that decision applies. said a spokesman at Washington headquarters, even if the school offers separate events with equal facilities for both

Carter Mum On Choice For Veep

WASHINGTON (AP) Jimmy Carter isn't saying who is at the top of his list for a running mate on the Democratic ticket, but delegates to the party's convention name Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. and Sen. Frank Church as their top choices for the second spot.

The delegates who will meet in New York City next week named more than 50 politicians and nonpoliticians as their choice for vice president, a continuing Associated Press survey of delegates found

Carter, who has enough delegate votes to win the Democratic presidential nomination, says he will interview five possible running mates before the convention.

His first interview was with Maine Sen. Edmund Muskie in Plains, Ga., on Monday. Carter said that because Muskie was the first to be interviewed does not mean he is Carter's first

The former Georgia governor, who has not released the names of the four other contenders besides Muskie, has said no one speaks for him on this decision.

And it is Carter's vote that will count at the convention. In the past, the convention always has approved the presidential candidate's choice for his run-

Brown, who defeated Carter in three late primaries, was named as the choice of 155 of the 988 delegates who stated a preference for vice president in interviews with The AP.

Another 153 delegates named Church, who also defeated Carter several times in later primaries.

In contrast, Muskie was named for the second post by only 15 delegates of the 2,222 who have been interviewed thus far in the AP survey.

About 54 per cent of the delegates did not give a choice for the vice presidential nomination when asked in the continuing AP delegate survey.

After Brown and Church, in order of total number of delegate mentions, were Sen. Adlai Stevenson III of Illinois. chosen by 115 delegates, and HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) Jimmy Carter, who used to be a governor himself, conferred with 30 Democratic governors today on a campaign unity mission, and they're expected to endorse him as the virtually nevitable nominee for the White House.

Democratic national chairman Robert Strauss met with the governors Monday to work out terms of a proposed endorsement statement, then relayed word of the arrangement to Carter.

It's evident, however, that Carter still has some fences to mend with his former colleagues. While Carter emerged from the Georgia state house to win his virtual guarantee of the Democratic presiden-programs championed by the governors

Even as he met privately with the Democratic caucus, the National Governors' Conference was due to work out the terms of a call for welfare reform, to include a proposal that the federal government finance a guaranteed minimum income for all Americans

Carter has opposed a federal takeover of welfare costs as too costly. He does favor another feature of the proposal before the conference, a nationwide standard for welfare payments to eliminate current variations among the states

He also has said that the revenue-sharing program, which the governors' conference pushed for years. should bypass the states with more money going to local

Maryland, long critical of Carter, said the Democrats want to know more about his position on those and other points. "I think that if he'd sit down with a number of the governors and tell us what his position is, it's going to be very difficult for anyone to misunderstand it or change it." said Mandel, who in the past has accused Carter of shifting positions.

Mandel was not ready to pledge that he would leave Hershey as a Carter supporter. "I would hope so," he said.

Given Carter's command of a nominating majority at the Democratic National Convention opening next Monday, neither Mandel nor any of the other Democrats has much choice. So Carter's overnight trip to Hershey seemed designed to seek enthusiasm among the conscripts.

'Bell Uprising' Planned To Greet Queen's Arrival

A new "uprising," the battle of the bell, was planned for the arrival of Queen Elizabeth II in Philadelphia today. Preacher and demonstrator Carl McIntire and his allies insist that England take back its bicentennial gift to the United States.

The bell, cast in the same London foundry that produced America's original Liberty Bell, "is a counterfeit and a phony," said the Rev. Mr. McIntire. because it does not carry the Biblical inscription that is on the old one.

His followers planned to confront the queen today with blaring car horns, slogan-bearing balloons, a rain of pamphlets from small planes and a circling airborne banner that reads "Britain Bans Bible Verse from Bell.'

In imitation of the Boston Tea Party, his group also planned to dump a mock-up of the new bell into the river.

The fusillade was timed for the approach of the royal yacht Britannia up the Delaware River to Penn's Landing in Philadelphia, where the queen was to dedicate the new bell.

Britain's ambassador to the United States, Peter Ramsbotham, replying to the protests, wrote the Rev. Mr. McIntire that his "distress is unfounded and results from a basic misunderstanding" since the bell was not meant to be a replica of the original.

But to the Rev. Mr. McIntire, "It is a great offense, and

He suggested the gift was the result of Communist influence. His protest, already registered in a torrent of letters to

U.S. and British officials and to the queen herself, is over the omission of a phrase from Levi-"Proclaim liberty throughout all the land unto all the inhabitants thereof."

"The British have misjudged the Spirit of '76 and they have injured the soul of our nation with its trust in God," said the Rev. Mr. McIntire, who has led numerous demonstrations for U.S. victory in Vietnam.

The Rev. Mr. McIntire, a radio preacher from Collingswood, N.J., said he rounded up one million signatures on petitions asking the queen to remove or "repair" the bell.

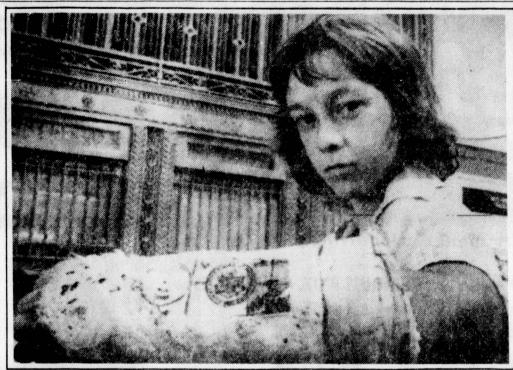

The new bell bears the inscription, "Let Freedom Ring," instead of the Bible verse. Said the Rev. Mr. McIntire, "Every Communist liberation movement in yelling, 'let freedom ring'.

"The bell is involved in the present psychological warfare designed to destroy our Declaration of Independence and turn our nation away from the Word of God.

Ramsbotham noted that the words, "Let Freedom Ring" came from the first verse of the American hymn, 'My Country 'tis of Thee." often sung to the tune of the British national anthem.

But the Rev. Mr. McIntire said. "The British are not quite ready to face up to the victory that our men won by the help of God, so they took their Bible verse away.

The Food and Drug Administration and the National Bureau of Standards announced the project Monday. The FDA said systems developed under the $1.1-million project would help the FDA uncover unsuspected problems involving new drugs.

FDA Commissioner Alexander M. Schmidt said that before a drug is approved it is tested not only in animals but also with a few thousand persons in clinical trials.

"Once it is approved, the number of people who receive the drug often increases rapidly to many thousands," Schmidt said. "Some adverse effects are so rare they can be detected only after a drug has been used by many thousands of patients or for an extended time.

"For this reason, the first few years after a drug is approved is a time for special alertness and careful evaluation.'

Schmidt said early monitoring also will be useful if

Cheer Up; Bills Could Be More

By Associated Press

Michigan residents who pay utility bills can be thankful they don't live in New York, but could look forward to saving some money on electricity if they lived in Portland, Ore.

Detroit Edison and Consumers Power Co., which provide electricity to the majority of Michigan residents, rank 11th and 12th in a comparison of rates between two dozen major utilites.

The survey by the state Public Service Commission shows New York residents pay the highest electric bills, an average of $44 for 500 kilowatt hours. Electric bills in other East Coast cities range from $16 to $28. Detroit Edison and Consumers Power both charge the average residential customer between $20 and $21 a month, the study shows.

In Portland Ore., an electric bill could be as low as $10.72.

The PSC study also showed that Michigan utility rates for electricity, natural gas and telephone service have gone in just one direction in the past 10

Ten years ago, Detroit Edison charged $12.95 for the Michigan Consolidated Gas Co. charges an average of $319 a year, 25th from the top of a survey involving 31 firms. Consumers, at $391, was in the middle for gas-supplying utilities. Other cities where chilly winds make winters all but unbearable and which have lower gas costs are Cleveland, at $314, and Minneapolis, $275.

In Boston, a year's gas would cost $771, while New Yorkers pay $688. The typical annual gas bill at Michigan Consolidated 10 years ago was $180.89, the study

The PSC survey noted that other studies peg rates at Michigan Bell Telephone as among the lowest rates in the nation. Michigan Bell's flat rate of $7.50 is lower than the $11.45 in Miami but higher than in California, where it costs just $5.70 for the convenience.

However, a Michigan Bell spokesman says extra charges for calling nearby areas makes up for the low charges in California and other cities, such as Philadelphia. The spokesman said Michigan same electricity that now costs Bell's rates for zoned calls are also among the lowest in the nation, less than half of comparable calls in Los Angeles. Bell, however, has a $178.2 million rate increase request pending before the PSC. The request is he largest in PSC

Consumers, has won recent rate increases and if Bell's rat request is approved, the bill would go up to $9.05.

Experts warn that dollar figures for utility rates do not give the whole utility picture,

Bell, along with Edison and since a number of factors involved. Those include priv or public ownership of a util types of fuel used to gener electricity, types of service fered, whether consumers m pay taxes for the service a how efficient the operation i
